Mr Nasby Waileth over Noo Gersey

ON THE WING, Nov. the 9th 1865.

Never wuz I in ez plesant a frame uv mind ez last nite. All wuz peace with me for after bein buffeted about the world for three skore years at last it seemd I to be ez tho forchune tired of persekutin a unfortunit bein, had taken me into faver. I had a solemn promis from the Dimekratic State Central Committy in the grait Stait uv N[illegible] that of so be our candidate for Guvner wuz duly elected I shood hev the posishun uv Door keeper to the House uv the Legislachur (wich in this Stait means the capital, & wich is certainly better than dwellin in the tents uv wicked grocery keepers (as I do), and a [illegible] exhibition uv this promise had prokoored for me unlimited facilities for borrerin.

On Wednesday nite I wuz a sittin in my room, a enjoyin the plezant reflecshun that in a few days I shood be placed beyond the contingencies uv fortune. Wood! oh wood! that I had dide then and there, ere that dream uv bliss wuz rudely broke! A wicked boy come runnin past with a paper which he had brought from the next ward where there lives a man who takes one. He flung it thro the window to me and past on. I opened it egerly, and glanced at the hed lines!

"NOO GERSEY—3,000 REPUBLIKIN!"

One long and piercin shreek wuz heard thro that house and when the inmates rushed into the room they found me insensate on the floor. The fatal paper lay near me explainin the cause uv the catastrophe. The kind hearted landlord after feelin uv my pockets and diskiverin that the contents thereof would not pay the arrearages uv my board, held a hurried consultashun with his wife as to the propriety uv bringin me to, he insistin that it wuz the only chance uv gittin what was back—she insistin that if I wuz brung to I'd go on runnin up the bill bigger and bigger and never pay at last. While they wuz arguin the matter pro and con, I happened to git a good smell uv his breath, wich restored me to consciousness to wunst, without further assistance.

When in trouble my poetic sole allus finds vent in song. Did ever poet who delited in tombs, and dark rollin streams, and consumpshun and blited hopes and decay, and sich themes, ever hev sich a subject ez I hev at this time? The follerin may be a consolashun to the few Dimokrats uv the North who hev gone so far into Copperheadism that they can't change their base:

A WAIL!

In the mornin we go forth rejoicin in our strength—in the evening we are busted and wailin!

Man born uv woman (and most men are) is uv few days and them is all full uv trouble that it's skarcely worth bein born at all.

In October I waded in up to knee deep, and now the waters of afflickshun are about my chin.

I look to the East, and Massychusetts rolls up Ablishun.

To the West I turn my eyes, and Wisconsin and Minnesota and Illinoys answer Ablishun.

Southward I turn my implorin gaze, and Maryland sends greetin—Ablishun!

In New York we had em, for lo! we run a soljer, who fought valiently and we put him on a platform, which stunk with nigger—yea, the savor thereof wuz louder than the Ablishun platform itself.

But behold! the people jeer and flout, and say the platform stinketh bad enough, but the smell thereof is not the smell uv the Afrikin—it is of the rotten material uv which it is composed, and the corrupshun they hev placed on it"—and New York goes Ablishun.

Slocum held hisself up and sed "come and buy." And our folks bought him and his tribe but he gotteth not his price.

Noo Gersey—Ablishun!!

Job's cattle wuz slain by murrain and hollerhorn and sich, and I not livin near Noo York, the flesh thereof he cood not sel.

But Job hed suthin left—still he cood sel the hides and tallow!

Lazarus hed sores but he hed dorgs to lick them.

Noo Gersey wuz the hide & taller uv the Dimocrisy, and lo that is gone.

What little is left of the Dimocrisy is all sore, but where is the dorg so low as to lick it?

Noo Gersey wuz our ewe lamb—lo! the strong hand uv Ablishunism hed taken it.

Noo Gersey wuz the Ararat on which our Ark rested—behold the dark waves of Ablishunism sweep over it.

Darkness falls over me, like a pall—the shadder uv woe encompasseth me.

Down my furrowed cheeks rolleth the tears uv anguish, varyin in size from a large Pea to a small tater.

Noo Gersey will vote for the Constooshinel Amendment, and lo! the Nigger will possess the land.

I see horrid visions!

On the Camden and Amboy, nigger brakesmen—and at the polls, niggers!

Where shall we find refuge?

In the North? Lo! it is barred agin us by Ablishunism.

In the South? In their eyes the Northern Copperhead findeth no favor.

In Mexico? There is war there, and we might be drafted.

Who will deliver us? Who will pluck us from the pit into which we hev fallen?

Where I shel go the Lord only knows, but my impression is, South Karliny will be my future home. Wade Hampton is electid Governor, certin, and in that noble State, one may perhaps preserve enough of the old Democratic State Rites leaven to leaven the whole lump.

I'm afloat, I'm afloat,
On the dark rollin sea.

And into what harbor fate will drive my weath or beaten bark the undersigned can not trooly say.

Noo Gersey—farewell! The world may stand it a year or two, but I doubt it.

Mournfully and sadly,
PETROLEUM V. NASBY,
Late Paster uv the Church uv the Noo Dispensashen.

Trial of Jefferson Davis

The Boston Daily Advertiser endorses the powerful argument of that great legal authority, Mr Bishop, of Boston, in favor of a military trial of the leading conspirator, as follows:

Mr Bishop holds, of course on the authority of the prize cases, that the National Government may rightfully exercise both belligerent and civil authority over rebels at the same time, and he denies that the laws of nations forbids the execution of a leading rebel, after rebellion has ripened into war. But he argues that the highest expediency and "almost the law itself" requires such a rebel to be sent for trial to a military tribunal. The law of nations, he argues, has relieved prisoners of war from the liability of suffering death at the hands of the captors, but this rule does not apply to its full extent to rebels captured by their sovereign; the military authorities may then take the life of a rebel in battle, or may take it after a military trial. "In other words assuming that the prisoner of war is to lose his life there is nothing in the way [illegible] being taken by judgment of a military court. On the other hand Mr Bishop contends that the submission of such a case as that of Jefferson Davis to a jury would bring the whole trial by jury into contempt. There is no question of [illegible] to be set [illegible] the Government has proceeded for four years on the ground that he is absolutely guilty, and could not [illegible] a panel of jurors fit to serve who have not given their voice and support in so doing. Mr Bishop [illegible] at the thought of submitting to a jury the question whether the National or rebel Government is in the wrong. If Mr Davis is found to be in the wrong the sentence of death is to be pronounced. If the Government is found to be in the wrong, then—"

In dealing with the [illegible] of the Constitution in [illegible] of treasons effected by civil war Mr Bishop treats at length of the question of reconstruction. Starting from the fact that in the rebelling State the governmental body [illegible] and that the United States through Congress and the President [illegible], that in calling conventions for reorganizing the States the United States authorities are not limited by anything contained in the old constitutions of the States in determining who shall vote. This point he claims has been settled by Congress and by the Executive—in the bill for guaranteeing republican government to the States, which passed the last Congress, but failed to obtain Mr Lincoln's signature, and in the case of Louisiana. This proposition he claims as an the expression of the old doctrine that nothing in the constitution or laws of a State can stand in the way of the United States in carrying out a provision of the national Constitution. And he makes the following application of the principle, which has already been [illegible] in one or two papers which have appeared as communications in our columns:

It was the duty of Congress as soon as a State seceded, to pass an act authorizing all loyal persons in the State to assemble in convention and form a new and loyal State government. This would indeed have abolished slavery, for the slaves were loyal and the process instituted by Congress would, necessarily have made them free, since they were to constitute the principal voting basis in the States, the whites being mainly disloyal. This was not done. But the right, as I before showed, vol. 1, sec 137, having vested in them cannot be taken away. There is no power either in our national Government or in any of our State governments, whereby, without a violation of the Constitution of the United States, the disfranchisement of the black race can be carried out.

Mr Bishop carries on his discussion as a question of law, and declines to enter into the province of statesmanship. But he cannot forbear sometimes giving his opinion on what is done in that province, for which he obviously has very little respect. We give the following extract, as an instance of this, and also as a specimen of a style of composition which is certainly very seldom seen in the pages of legal commentaries.

Statesmanship works by indirect means, it quibbles, it perverts the truth, it does for the public good those things which, if done for private good, would send the doers to the prison or the gallows. Law is straightforward and honest; the same, or nearly the same, to-day as yesterday, the same for the black man as for the white man; the same toward the north pole as toward the tropics. If I may say a personal thing, it has been my own fortune, good or ill, to admire and hold in honorable regard the law, but not to see the beauties which I suppose I ought in statesmanship. Yet if, in this note, I speak further of statesmanship, in a manner which, according to my own standard of judgment, is not flattering, it is not because I have any malice toward its authors and supporters. It is in favor, much more than the law, with the good and great of our country; with those men, even, whom I number among my personal friends, whom I love most sincerely, and whose friendship I prize most highly. I know it is an idiosyncracy of mine that I do not admire it, since everybody else does, and truth with us is understood to go by majorities. If, therefore, in explaining the law a little further in this note, I am compelled to explain some things about statesmanship, the reader will understand that it is all in praise of statesmanship.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE STATE.

FRIDAY MORNING JANUARY 12, 1866

THE UNION STATE CENTRAL COMMITTEE

Are requested to meet at SALEM ON THURSDAY THE 18TH DAY OF FEBRUARY next. When vacancies may occur in the Committee the County Committees are requested to fill them as it is desirable to have a full attendance at that time. J R MOORES

Chairman Union State Central Committee

Salem Oregon Jan 1st 1866.

The Finances

The necessity of a return to specie payments is universally felt and acknowledged. A depreciated currency is always a great evil. So long as we have so much paper afloat—so many more promises to pay without the ability to perform—the evil will remain uncorrected. Almost the entire press of the country is demanding a contraction of our paper currency. The great over issues of paper were made to answer a pressing demand at a time when the preservation of the country depended upon the obtainment of material to prosecute the war. But having now escaped from that peril, every principle of economy, as well as a regard for permanent prosperity urgently demands a return to the safe financial system of former times.

Hon. Amasa Walker, a distinguished financier has recently published a paper on the resumption of specie payments. He furnishes tables, showing the amount of paper in circulation. According to his figures, the Government currency, with the total liabilities of the banks, State and National, amounts to $1,342,510,173. The specie which the New York city banks contain, as compared with their liabilities, amounts to about eight cents on the dollar. In every other city in the Union, the proportion of specie is very much smaller. The coin has been sold and has gone out of the country. How are the banks to resume specie payments when they do not hold more than three or four per cent. of their immediate liabilities? How it is to be accomplished, Mr. Walker proceeds as follows to show:

It is to be done by the gradual contraction of the currency until it is equal to the natural volume, which the country requires; and this will be indicated and determined by the gradual fall of gold until it is on a par with paper. There is no other way, and none other need be thought of. If we are not ready to do just this, then the inflation, with all its evils, will continue. The Government must take in a large part of its greenbacks, and the banks a large part of their circulation. Thus and thus only can the object be effected.

But when? Congress should move at once in the matter, for it was by its action that the laws of value were suspended. It should determine forthwith that the thing shall be done, and fix the rate at which the greenbacks shall be withdrawn—so many millions per month. Then everybody would know what to depend upon, and what to do. As the greenbacks are withdrawn, the banks must of necessity contract their issues, because the law compels them to keep "25 per cent of lawful money" upon the whole amount of their circulation and deposits, and therefore as the greenbacks disappear, there will be no lawful money but specie, and to get specie they must contract their circulation, so as to stop the export of gold, and cause, to some extent, a reflux of that article from Europe.

With this policy fully established by the action of the Government, our whole system would be gradually changed, prices would be reduced to their natural point, the industrial and financial interest of the nation placed upon a sure basis, and permanent prosperity secured.

THE JAMAICA TROUBLES.—There is a lesson for our country in the atrocities recently perpetrated by the negroes of Jamaica; but it is a lesson which ought to receive a far different interpretation from that which some would give it. It is indeed an "awful warning" to this country, and should teach our people not to oppress this race still more, but to treat them with common justice and thus disarm them of all motives of revenge such as those which incited the negroes of Jamaica to perpetrate their late horrible crimes. True, we may indignantly say that no treatment, however harsh, unjust or severe, could afford a sufficient provocation to justify the appalling murders which have lately been committed in Jamaica; but common reason will suggest that such conduct is not so very surprising in those who are entirely uneducated, who have received no moral instruction, who feel keenly the wrong that is done them, and whose first impulse is to retaliate an injury. The lash is not more injustice, but the reverse. A humane policy toward these people will be more effective to prevent such deeds of violence than the lash, chains and slavery.

The style of freedom that has prevailed in Jamaica for the last thirty years, has been a mockery. Slavery is abolished only in name. The aim of the planters of the island is to obtain labor without compensation. A British official who has resided twelve years in Jamaica, publishes some valuable information on this subject in a London journal. He says the whites have often "compelled the blacks to work for one shilling per day—wages to be paid monthly. Frequently they are not paid at all." He writes also, that "according to the established law of the island, every freeholder was entitled to vote, but the Legislature forbade any one to vote unless he paid ten shillings, and that condition shut out most of the freeholders." Only three thousand pounds sterling are annually expended on education, while ninety thousand pounds are given in salaries to the officials. The freedmen are taxed to bring in emigrants so as to cheapen labor still more. This writer says the negroes do not refuse to work, but that they are only people who will work; and that "Jamaica is notoriously the worst governed dependency of Great Britain, and nothing but the law abiding docility of the negro, and his sworn loyalty to the British crown, has preserved a severely oppressed people in a State of peaceable endurance."

Such being the facts in relation to the treatment of the blacks of Jamaica, the precise nature of the "warning" afforded by their recent turbulent conduct will be understood. The "warning" too is so emphatic that we ought not at this juncture to disregard it.

THE SOUTHERN PIRATES.—From June 1861 to the close of the career of the Shenandoah in August 1865, there were captured and bonded or destroyed by rebel pirates four steamers seventy eight ships, forty three brigs, eighty two barks, and sixty eight schooners; in all, two hundred and seventy five vessels. The number of crafts engaged in this piratical employment was twenty, their names were as follows: Savannah, Sumter, Jeff. Davis, J. O. Nixon, Calhoun, Petrel, Judah, Winslow, Sallie, Nashville, Alabama, Florida, Clarence, Tacony, Georgia, Retribution, Tallahassee, Chickamauga, Shenandoah and Stonewall.

AN INK MINE.—They have a new discovery down in California. In the vicinity of Buena Vista lake they have an ink mine! The Los Angeles News says a person has arrived at that town bringing from the locality above named a bottle full of "a mineral substance very much resembling crude petroleum but without any smell and possessing all the qualities of a fine writing fluid." The "ink maker's occupation is gone!"

The Statesman thinks that Oregon has certain claims on the Government which ought to be paid. Certain moneys, it thinks should be refunded. At the same time it seems to assent to our position that no State bounties should be paid by the General Government. Will the Statesman be kind enough to tell us what the particular claims are which it would have the United States recognize and pay?

When men are indifferent to us, we grow indifferent to their indifference.

The Pirate Semmes.

Dispatches are received confirmatory of the announcement that Semmes commander of the rebel piratical craft Alabama is to be tried at Washington by a naval court martial. The accusation against him is that he has violated the usages of war, as set forth in the following specification:

"On the 18th day of June, 1864, off Cherbourg, the said Raphael Semmes being in command of the rebel steamer Alabama an engagement having taken place between the said steamer and the United States steamer Kearsarge ordered or permitted a white flag to be hoisted on board of said rebel steamer and took opportunity of the cessation thereby caused in the engagement and of the trust reposed in him to make his escape from the said rebel steamer for the purpose of avoiding the actual surrender of his person as a prisoner of war and the responsibility thereby incurred and subsequently, with out having been exchanged as a prisoner he engaged in hostilities against the United States."

Of course the case will turn upon the point whether the act of Semmes in hoisting the white flag was a surrender in fact. If by that act he made himself a virtual prisoner, then it is clear that his life is forfeited by his having subsequently served in the rebel army without being exchanged. It will be remembered that Captain Winslow published a letter shortly after the engagement with the Alabama, in which he strongly urged that Semmes ought in honor, to give himself up as his prisoner. But the pirate commander determining to make the most of his good luck in having escaped, came over to the United States and entered into the military service of the rebellion.

It is, no doubt, perfectly proper to put Semmes on trial upon this accusation, but the issue is one in which the country has very little interest. No one has yet been tried for treason, the main offence. Why continue to punish the inferior agents of the rebellion when the heads of the movement (with an exception or two) have been pardoned? Mercy has now gone so far that occasional severity is hardly less than actual injustice.

The Washington Chronicle, (Forney's paper,) may we suppose be called the principal organ of the President. No journal in the country has praised the Presidential plan of reconstruction in loftier strains, and even it is now compelled to acknowledge virtually, that the scheme is a failure. The Government which the rebels have been allowed to establish is the old Confederate Government in everything but in name. The officials of the "reconstructed" States are, with scarcely an exception, the same individuals who administered the "Government of the Confederate States of America." We have exacted no guarantees, we have conceded all that the rebels could claim. Our concessions too, have been taken in a wrong spirit, and the rebels have been made bold and insolent by having been dealt with so much better than they deserve. The Washington Chronicle thus remarks upon the spirit they have lately manifested:

The best friends of the Southern people are now willing to admit that they have not done their share in the work of restoration. Instead of accepting the magnanimous terms of the Government in the spirit in which they were offered, and obliterating all traces of the rebellion, they have pursued a hesitating policy, which has rendered the way to full restoration and harmony more difficult. With the conditions squarely before them, and with a full knowledge of the fact that they could only resume their position in the Union by an unconditional compliance with them, they have pursued such a course as is calculated to make their most anxious friends believe that they have no heart in the work.

SOUTHERN OBJECTIONS TO GOV. ANDREW'S ENTERPRISE.—Most of the Southern people welcome the prospect of emigration from the North, but the Columbia (Tenn.) Herald retains the old prejudice against Yankees, and says of Gov. Andrew's emigration scheme:

"Gov. Andrew, with certain gentlemen of like caliber and aggressive proclivities, have hit upon a plan for filling 'sections of the South with a population having Northern energy and ideas!' May God save the South from any such additional affliction. Having, through a providential interference failed to confiscate the property of the South for the benefit of the negroes and knaves 'with Northern energy and ideas,' they now resort to a scheme, less flagrant perhaps in its offensive details, but equally sinister in its design, and equally sure to operate disastrously to the peace and happiness of the South."

"STATESMEN" OF THE PACIFIC COAST.—Sam Bowles, in one of his letters to the Springfield Republican from California, discusses the public men of the Pacific coast. Here is a specimen of his criticism:

Perhaps the most influential, intellectual mind among the Pacific Congressmen is that of Senator Stewart, of Nevada. He shows qualities of the first order, comprehending the affairs of his section, and stating them with vigorous effect. Mr Conness, the California Senator, is a disciple of Broderick, and possesses great perseverance and force and a conceded integrity in public affairs, but does not inherit the breadth and commanding qualities of his predecessor and patron. He is too much the victim of his hatred and self-conceit for largest power; he is rather the leader of a faction than the Senator of a State.

THE FENIAN ORGANIZATION.—The Chicago Tribune thus charges on this organization:

As an attempt to browbeat the press, this challenge, sent by the head of the Fenian Brotherhood to editor Raymond, is an insult, not only to the laws of the State of New York and to the entire American newspaper press but it proves how little the Fenian organization is in sympathy with liberty and how little it knows of republican institutions. So far from having capacity to wrest Ireland from Great Britain and found a new republic they seem to have no brains or character to make decent and law abiding citizens of the republic under whose undeserved protection they live.

Late Eastern dispatches give the following:

Since October 31st, 55,000 troops white and colored, have been mustered out, leaving now in service, 120,000. It is estimated that $5,000,000 will be required to pay the troops on the 1st of January. The Paymaster General estimates that the total bounties paid to volunteers during the war will reach $3,000,000.

—During the first five months of the present fiscal year, beginning July 1st, the receipts from customs at the port of New York have exceeded by nearly $1,000,000 the total receipts from that source during 1863 and 1864. The receipts for December, are estimated at $10,000.

800 Freedmen purchased an estate near Williamsburg, Va., for $30,000 each as the result of their savings the past year.

A JOURNEY OF FOUR MONTHS.—Last evening we received a large lot of California exchanges of the 21st and 22d of September. They were much worn by their travels. Whether they have been around the world or hiding in an obscure corner of some remote post office, we cannot say. But from their ragged appearance we should incline to the opinion that they had traveled a long way and have received many buffetings on their forced and toilsome journey.

The following appeared in the New York Times of November 26th:

General Pope thinks the true policy to be adopted with the Indians is to keep rascally white men out of their way. He is suspicious that many of the so called outrages on the stage coaches on the plains were in reality committed by white scoundrels with painted faces.

"The new gold notes are going to California, where they will circulate in lieu of gold, and thus become a national gold currency. Some of us look to these gold notes as about the only means to restore specie payments.—New York Express, 28th November."

The New York Tribune on the 1st ultimo, divided among its stockholders, $30,000 as the profits of four months' business. The entire original stock of the institution was only $100,000.

President Johnson told a gentleman who called on him that he was clearly of the opinion that negroes have now the legal right to bring suits, and testify in any United States court.

A lady named her son the other day, Petroleum. Her reason for doing so was, that when she had occasion to whip him, she might "strike ile."

[DISPATCHES TO THE OREGONIAN.]

DATES TO JANUARY 6.

California News

SAN FRANCISCO Jan 11.—The steamer Golden City took $383,920 in treasure and a large number of passengers in the 10th October.

The safe of J. B. Kittenhouse United States first paymaster at Camp ... was broken into and robbed of $4,000 in gold. The robbery was traced to two men, Neil McLaughlin and one Bradley. Bradley was captured in Panama and about $8,000 recovered from him. McLaughlin came to this city with his share and was arrested a few days ago. After his capture, in order to prevent his escape either by habeas corpus or any other means he was placed on board the Saranac, where he had been since, until to day he took his departure on the steamer Golden City for Panama in charge of United States Marshal ... The officers are on the track of McLaughlin's share of the money, and are confident of success in regaining a large portion of it.

Judge Haight, of the United States Circuit Court, yesterday ordered that Henry H. Hyde Master in Equity in the case of George Jordan vs the South Fork Canal Company do forthwith execute and deliver a deed of the premises sold to the purchasers in accordance with the decree and sale. It appearing that there is due $91,480.27 with interest from November 8th, 1861 execution is ordered to issue. Defendants are also ordered to deliver into the receiver's hands the Iowa Hiton Weber Ditch, ... Ditch and Shoba District including all the branches, feeders, etc., together with the books, moneys and accounts of the company making also into an order of the Court made on the 21st of December last. This virtually ends this case which has been on trial for over ten years in the United States Courts.

The brig Francisco arrived to day from Santa Barbara and reports that Edwin Gono, second mate, and John Barrons were washed overboard and drowned.

Harrington the notorious highwayman and burglar was sent over to San Quentin to day for two years for robbery.

The mining share market seems to drag a little with not much activity compared with the morning Board yesterday. Gould and Curry declined $50, Savage $20, Chollar Potosi $3, Belcher $2.50 and Imperial $2. On the other hand, Yellow Jacket and Belcher each, advanced $5. In the absence of later gold dispatches there is not much doing. For legal tenders at Board 70¼ was paid and 71 asked.

Markets.

Coffee—Prices have advanced: sales 3,700 lbs. Costa Rica in lots from second hands at 27c closing at 28@30c. Java at auction realized good prices: $29 50@$29 95 ℔ 100 lbs. The market of teas buoyant. Candles are in demand at full prices; sales 600 boxes Emery's and 750 do Knapp's private; quotable at 21c. Drugs etc.—Blue stone has declined to 15c. The large losses resulting from late arrivals has imparted more tone to the market, and most kinds of patent medicines have advanced 20@25 per cent. within 30 days. Sugar—Sales 150 barrels local refinery D at 15½c; Circle A crushed is quotable at 15¾@16c per pound.

BRITISH ATROCITIES IN JAMAICA.—The particulars of the "energetic measures" adopted to suppress the uprising in Jamaica are sickening. Thus an officer in her Majesty's service, Colonel Hiller, cooly writes:

I must not forget to tell you that I have got Paul Bogle's valet for my guide—a little fellow of extraordinary intelligence. A light rope tied to the stirrup, and a revolver now and then to his head cause us to understand each other, and he knows every single rebel in the island by name and face, and has just been selecting the Captains, Colonels and Secretaries out of an immense gang of prisoners just come in here, whom I shall have to shoot to morrow morning.

The authorities were not very particular in discriminating between the innocent and the guilty, as will be seen by the following from the Jamaica Standard:

The supposed rebels that were captured and brought in during the day of Tuesday last, and early on the following morning, were examined by the Provost Marshal at his office, but beyond being stragglers, nothing was proved that warranted the committal of the whole of them before a court-martial. About thirty were, one by one, lashed to a gun and catted, receiving fifty lashes on the bare back, laid on after the man-of-war fashion, and the rest (about twenty) committed as rebels. Among the rebels was George Marshall a brown man about twenty five years old, who on receiving forty seven lashes, ground his teeth and gave a ferocious look of defiance at the Provost Marshal. He was immediately ordered to be taken from the gun and hanged. No time was lost and he was accordingly strung up in the presence of the insurrectionists.

Other instances of the frenzy which possessed the English are given. The London Daily News pertinently remarks:

Of the ramifications of the alleged conspiracy, of the guilt or innocence of those who have been arrested by the authorities at Kingston, and, by a strange stretch of arbitrary power, transported from a place not under martial law to one which is, and there tried by court martial and executed, we express no opinion; for the evidence is not yet before us. But the military dispatches and the newspaper correspondence prove one thing sufficiently. They prove that the dominant race has, as is but too apt to happen, utterly lost sense and courage and self command in the frenzy of fear which has fallen upon them. They prove that in this agony of apprehension officers and civilians are vieing with each other in cruelty. They prove that the ferocity, the thirst of blood, which we denounce in savages can take possession, too, of English hearts, and that mercy and justice can be forgotten by English officers as thoroughly as by the Indian or the Cossack.

Atrocious as these doings of "our British cousins" may appear, there is nothing new in them. They are only a repetition of British colonial history.

IMPORTANT REVENUE DECISION.—The following decision concerning the liability of the manufacturers and producers of articles especially exempt from duty under section 96 of the Revenue Act, is important:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
OFFICE OF INTERNAL REVENUE,
WASHINGTON November 6, 1865.

The Act of July 1862 declares that certain articles enumerated in the last proviso but one of the 75th section should not be regarded as manufactures within the meaning of the act. The producers of these articles heretofore, were not required to take a manufacturer's license. They were, however, required to take license as dealers according to their annual sales.

By the 96th section of the act of June 30, 1864, many of the articles not regarded as manufactures within the meaning of the former act are exempt from duty while others are made taxable as manufactures. The same act section 97, paragraph 31 defines a manufacturer to be any person, firm or corporation, who shall manufacture, by hand or machinery any goods wares or merchandise exceeding annually the sum of $1,000. Any person, firm or corporation, therefore who shall manufacture by hand or machinery any of the articles exempted from excise tax by the 95th section are to be regarded as manufacturers, and are liable to take a manufacturer's license.

The articles exempted by the 96th section are as follows:

Newspapers boards, shingles laths and other lumber staves hoops, shooks headings and timber partially wrought and unfinished for chairs, tubs pails hubs spokes fellies, snaths, lasts, shovel and fork handles, matchwood, umbrella stretchers, alcohol made or manufactured of spirits or materials upon which the duties imposed by law shall have been paid, bone dust plaster or gypsum mill, burning fluid printer's ink, flax prepared for textile or felting purposes until actually woven, marble or slate or other building stones in blocks rough and unwrought charcoal, coke all flour and meal made from grain, bread and breadstuffs butter, cheese, concentrated milk, cider and cider vinegar, cane sugar or molasses made from sorghum or sugar cane, ... whale and fish oil, ... the manufacture of silver ware ... rolled or prepared ... plates ... used exclusively, and cut tapes and small wares used in the manufacture of hoopskirts and all manufactures where the increased value does not exceed five per centum of the cost of the materials from which they are made or produced.

REV MR NASBY.—The Reverend Petroleum V. Nasby has since his election ceased preaching to his congregation in New Jersey giving them up as a bad job. He was last heard from in Washington being very seriously talked of by a "subjugated and repentant Alabamian." While the unhappy Petroleum is hunting his hole it is proper to set him right in point of identity. He is not Alf Burnett, the comedian, but J. R. Locke of the Findley (O.) Jeffersonian.

The following is a general transcript of an epitaph: "Here lies the remains of Thomas Woodhen—the most amiable of husbands, the most excellent of men. N. B.—The name is Woodcock, but it would not come in rhyme."

A lady and gentleman entered the ferry house of Jersey City on their way to New York and walked down on the bridge engaged in earnest conversation. They were so deeply absorbed in their subject as to be utterly unmindful of everything else, and, not noticing that no boat was in, walked deliberately overboard. They were saved.

A London antiquarian bookseller has for sale "The letters of Voltaire, translated by Benjamin Franklin," with the arms of George Washington on the cover, with his signature on the title page. It is worth just about its weight in gold.

THE MONTANA ROAD MEETING.—Pursuant to call a large number of the business men of this city assembled at the rooms of the Portland Stock and Exchange Board yesterday for the purpose of providing means for the opening of the road from the head of the Lake to Horse Plains in Montana Territory.

On motion of Mr. H. R. Thompson Mr. J. [illegible] was called to the chair and [illegible] was appointed Secretary.

The object of the meeting having been stated and the advantages to be secured by the construction of the strip of road alluded to pointed out,

Mr. Ladd addressed the meeting, giving his views, as based upon information derived from Mr. H. D. Sanborn and others, as to the probable cost of the opening of the road, which was at from $8,000 to $10,000. The people on the "other side" (as the term is used to designate those east or west of the Rocky Mountain belt,) would, in case this road was opened, and the steamer placed on the lake, with a line of stages to the Columbia river, connect very closely with us, but if they did not, it was the intention of Mr. Ish that communication should be established through from White Bluffs, the head of navigation on the Columbia, to Helena or Virginia, in the spring as he himself would prepare to fully stock the road. Mr. Ladd said it seemed that the people here interested in real estate and trade, unless they would open this route, must certainly be blind to their true interests. He felt a deep interest in the matter and had made such representation as he was able to the Oregon delegation in Congress with a view to obtaining an appropriation from Government to build a suitable road to connect us with Montana. Yet it was impossible that that could be of immediate service and we must act for ourselves in this matter and act at once. Mr. Moody now engaged in the construction of a steamer for the Pend d'Oreille Lake, Mr. Ladd stated, was willing to take charge of the funds we might raise, and disburse the same in a satisfactory manner. His interest in the enterprise would be sufficient to warrant that he would see the money properly expended. During the recent efforts of people here to raise a sum sufficient for the purpose of opening the route, the assurances that this boat would be built were not perfect, and only about $2,000 to $2,500 were subscribed. Now the people would have more confidence in the success of the movement, and would be more certain to aid it to a successful end. Mr. Ladd referred to the fact that in Virginia City there were stocks of goods worth from $600,000 to $800,000 in store last year, and that stocks were now on the way to the Territory that this year were in transit this season. No goods can be had in Montana from St. Louis before the last of June or first of July, and there was every reason to expect that a good trade could be secured to us on account of the advantages of the Columbia river over the Missouri for transportation. All goods were cheaper last year at Portland than at St. Louis, and transportation can be made materially less from this, than the other side. Mr. Sanborn estimates in his letters that $8,000 will make a good road from the Jocco Agency to the Lake, and in the event of making such road wagons can go over it, and the trade would be uninterrupted the entire year round except during the close of navigation by ice. By this route freight can be laid down in Blackfoot from this city at 12 cents per pound.

Mr. S. G. Reed followed Mr. Ladd, and produced convincing evidence to show the importance of the citizens' taking decisive steps at once to secure the trade. He quoted the Montana Post to show a population of 50,000 civilized inhabitants, above the 45th parallel of latitude. It was three years ago a savage country, but in the short space of time which has intervened the gold attractions have congregated the large multitude found within the borders of the Territory, and cities have been founded there in which are to be found all the comforts and improvements of modern society. Virginia City the capital of the Territory, is situated on the Jefferson fork of the Missouri. Nearly all the most popular and rich mines have been discovered since February last, or in less than one year. Previous to that time there was no stock of goods in the Territory, principally [illegible] unknown, and but few persons [illegible] were there. Subsequently those who went to St. Louis to make their purchases did so with the idea that the stock would last for eight months at least and bought accordingly. The result was a scarcity and high commanding prices. Then the people began to learn that the difficulties which beset them in transporting goods from St. Louis became the subject of debate, and they must look for a better source of supplies. It was shown that purchases made in March at St. Louis were early purchases, and could not be laid down in Helena or Virginia before July or later, while purchases of October and November were nine months on the road. By the opening of the route from this city to Helena, purchases could be landed there inside of thirty days, at all seasons of the year save a short interim in winter.

Several other interesting speeches were made, which we would like very much to refer to, but our space will not admit of further mention of them at this time. The meeting closed by adopting the following as a heading for the subscriptions:

"We the undersigned agree to pay the respective amounts set opposite our names, to be applied towards the opening of a wagon road, from the head of navigation on Clark's Fork of the Columbia to Horse Plains, in Montana Territory, a distance of 65 miles. The several amounts subscribed to be paid forthwith, and the money deposited at the banking house of Ladd & Tilton, subject to the direction of the subscribers."

On motion a committee of two from each Ward was appointed as follows, to solicit subscriptions:

First Ward—Captain A. P. Ankeny and A. C. Ripley.
Second Ward—H. J. Northrup, and Lloyd Brooke.
Third Ward—Joseph Knott, and Thos. J. Carter.

The committees were instructed to take all sums offered, large and small, or acceptable paper, to be deposited at the banking house of Ladd & Tilton, after which a call will be published for the subscribers to meet and take such further action as may be deemed necessary.

The committees as above appointed will begin their work this morning, and it is earnestly desired that all [illegible] interest to the object as they may be able to aid.

A CITY HALL.—It is thought by many that the city of Portland, so long as she pays interest on $4,000 at the rate of 1 per cent. per month, for a single room in which to hold the Recorder's Court and weekly sessions of the Common Council, will never be any better off than a [illegible], and we learn that a movement is likely to be set on foot soon which will secure the city ample room for the purposes mentioned, as well as afford the City Auditor, Treasurer, Marshal, Street Commissioner, Assessor, Chief Engineer, etc., proper and sufficient room for the transaction of their respective duties. At so much trouble as exists to those who now have business to transact with them in their scattered localities. By the city paying $5,000 it is thought the entire [illegible] story of a three story brick, in an eligible situation and easily accessible from all parts of the city, may be obtained. The building will be so constructed as to supply a great want in another respect—that of a hall, for concerts, lectures, balls or parties of any kind. The third story and part of the ground floor will be devoted to this purpose. The remainder of the ground floor will be occupied by four store-rooms. We are not at liberty to make known all the facts in reference to this matter of a City Hall, as the contracting parties have not as yet agreed upon full terms, but the future will serve to show the feasibility of the arrangement and we trust it will be successful.

FATHER BUCHARD'S LECTURE.—The largest audience ever assembled in any church in this city were present on Sunday evening at the Catholic church to listen to a lecture by Rev. Father Buchard, S. J. The subject chosen was, "Misrepresentations of the Catholic Church by [illegible]" and the able manner in which the lecturer handled his subject, has been a source of general commendation from persons of all creeds who were present. It is impossible, of course, in our limited space, to give even an idea of the arguments used by the reverend gentleman, to disabuse the minds of non-Catholics of the various misrepresentations made regarding the dogmas of the Church of Rome, but every person with whom we have talked, who had been present on the occasion, agree in the opinion that the lecture was most able, logical and convincing. We hope that Father Buchard will remain in our midst, and establish himself permanently in Portland.

SUDDEN DEATH.—A very estimable lady by the name of [illegible], was found dead in her house yesterday morning, corner of Main and Second streets. She had died during the night, of apoplexy. There was no one in the house but her son, a youth of ten years, who, on waking, about four o'clock in the morning, alarmed the nearest neighbor, M. C. S. Silver who immediately went to the house, but the lady was then nearly cold, and had the appearance of having been some hours dead. Mrs. H. was very much respected by all who knew her. She leaves a husband who is now in the mines of John Day's river, and has relatives near Eugene City, who were yesterday apprised by telegraph of the melancholy event.

BENEFIT OF JOHNNY MACK.—Johnny Mack, the deservedly popular dancer, takes a benefit this evening at the Theatre. His friends are anxious that he should have a crowded audience, and why should he not? He is one of those who is ever successful at amusing others, and all should contribute in turn to amuse him [illegible] assure the public that nothing would gratify him more than to see a "bumper" of a house to-night. [illegible]

SKATING.—To say that the ice on Giles' Lake was magnificent yesterday, according to the representations made by all who skated, would poorly convey the true idea of its smooth, glassy surface. Several ladies and gentlemen were out skating yesterday and should there be nothing to obstruct the sport or make it disagreeable, a large attendance may be expected in that locality to-day.

QUICK PASSAGES.—The sailing vessels in this port at present discharging freight have made very quick passages. The one three and the other four days from the bar of San Francisco to the Columbia river bar. The safety of the packets in this line is beyond peradventure, and those who are waiting to take passage to California can at present do no better than go on board.

NAVIGATION.—By cutting some ice in the Columbia river yesterday the steamer Bonnie Troup was enabled to reach the Washington Territory side but that was all. She will not try it again to-day, but will go over on [illegible]. The ice was new, and as the weather was very cold, was still forming yesterday. The O. S. N. Co. will not send a steamer out for the Cascades to-day.

ARRIVAL OF THE ACTIVE.—The steamship Active Capt. Thorn, was telegraphed as passing the mouth of the Cowlitz river at six o'clock last evening. She had not arrived up to the hour of our going to press but is more than likely to be at the dock by the time this paper reaches the city reader.

THE WAY THE MAIL IS CARRIED.—A newspaper dealer in this city received a package of the San Francisco Bulletin, last evening by mail dated Sept. 23d, 1865—just one hundred and nine days from San Francisco. Truly, the overland mail is a great institution.

UNITED STATES CIRCUIT COURT—DEADY J.—Thursday, Jan. 11, 1866. A libel against the bark A. A. Eldridge [illegible], was commenced.

WASHED AWAY.—We see it stated that a change of the tides in Shoalwater Bay, has caused a large [illegible] as Sand Island, to be entirely washed away.

INTERESTING OLD DOCUMENT.—The Fredericksburg Ledger contains the will of the Mother of Washington, as written by herself, and recorded in the Clerk's office of Spottsylvania county. Such a venerable document which carries us back to the days and scenes of the infancy of this now mighty Republic cannot be otherwise than interesting to our readers. What associations are called up by it! By what extraordinary events has American progress from the date of this will to the present time been distinguished!

We give the spelling as in the original, though probably this is the scrivener's.

In the name of God. Amen. I, Mary Washington of Fredericksburgh in the County of Spotsylvania, being in good health but calling to mind the uncertainty of this life and willing to dispose of what remains of my worldly estate, to make and publish this, my last will, recommending my soul into the hands of my Creator, hoping for a remission of all my sins, through the merits and mediation of Jesus Christ the Savior of mankind. I dispose of all my worldly estates as follows:

Imprimis.—I give to my son Gen. George Washington, all my lands on Accokeek Run in the county of Stafford, and also my negro boy George to him and his heirs forever. also, my best bed, bedstead and Virginia cloth curtains, (the same that stands in my best room) my quilted blue and white quilt, and my best dressing glass.

Item.—I give and devise to my son, Charles Washington, my negro man Tom, to him and his assigns forever.

Item.—I give and devise to my daughter, Betty Lewis, my phaeton and bay horse.

Item.—I give and devise to my daughter in law Hanna Washington my purple cloth cloak, lined with shag.

Item.—I give and devise to my grandson Corbin Washington, my negro wench Old Bet my riding chair, and two black horses, to him and his assigns forever.

Item.—I give and devise to my grandson, Fielding Lewis, my negro man Frederick, to him and his assigns forever. also eight silver table spoons, half my crockery ware, and the blue and white tea china, walnut bookcase, oval table, one bed, one bed spread, one pr. sheets, one pr. blankets and white cotton counterpane, two table cloths, six red leather chairs, half of my pewter, one half of my iron kitchen furniture.

Item.—I give and devise to my grandson Lawrence Lewis, my negro wench Lydia, to him and his assigns forever.

Item.—I give and devise to my grand daughter Bettie Carter, my negro woman, Little Bet and her future increase, to her and her assigns forever, also, my largest looking glass, my walnut writing desk with drawers, a square dining table, one bed, bedstead, bolster, one pillow, one blanket and pair of sheets, white Virginia cloth counterpaine and purple curtains, my red and white tea china, teaspoons, and the other half of pewter, crockery wear, and the remainder of my kitchen furniture.

Item.—I give to my grandson, George Washington, my next best dressing glass, one bedstead, bed, bolster, one pillow, one pair sheets, one blanket, and counterpaine.

Item.—I devise all my wearing apparel to be equally divided between my granddaughters, Bettie Carter, Fanny Balland Milly Washington, but should my daughter, Betty Lewis, fancy any one, two or three articles thereof, she is to have them before a division thereof.

Item.—I nominate and appoint my said son, Gen. George Washington, executor of this my will, and as I owe few or no debts, I direct my executor to give no security, nor to appraise my estate; but desire the same may be allotted to my devises with as little trouble and delay as may be, desiring their acceptance thereof as all the token I now have to give them of my love to them.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and seal, this 20th day of May, 1788.

MARY WASHINGTON. [SEAL]

Signed, sealed and published in our presence, and signed by us in the presence of the said Mary Washington, at her desire.

James Mercer, Joseph Walker, John Ferneyhough—witnesses.

THE SPRINGFIELD ARMORY.—A correspondent of the New Haven Palladium thus writes of the Springfield, Massachusetts Armory:

In Springfield we visited about the only place of interest—the United States Armory. It is gradually returning to the habits of peace, all the storehouses which were turned into workshops and resounded with the ring of hammers during war time, are finding their way back again to simple storehouses, and many of the armorers have been returned to other occupations. The sentry-boxes which were set all about the extensive grounds in 1861, and occupied thenceforward by vigilant soldiers to protect the property from a raid by rebels or copperheads, still stand, but they are unused. No new muskets are being now manufactured at Springfield, the whole force being used in repairing the rusty muskets which have been brought from the battle field. In one building alone, standing butt to muzzle upon the floor, were two hundred and twenty-five thousand of these old weapons—at least a quarter of an acre, I should think. If they could speak, what tragic stories they would tell! Loyal and rebel muskets are huddled together here. The history of the whole war is in this room; Gettysburg, Vicksburg, Fredericksburg, Nashville, Chancellorsville, Antietam, the Seven Days' fights, Port Hudson, Corinth, Slaughter's Mountain, Kenesaw and Lookout, where the Titans waged battle among the clouds. If this old bayonet, rusty with blood half way to its socket, were sentient, what a drama it could write upon this greasy floor!—of privation and exposure, of patience and heroism, of diabolical hate and the torture of Southern prison pens, of the midnight escape and the stealthy flight and the fidelity and bravery of the slaves! Here is a Belgian pistol. Here a Hungarian saber, describing a quarter of a circle in its curve. Here, any number of English muskets—conveying to American citizens the very kindly assurances of Her Britannic Majesty. [By the way, why does not Clarendon reclaim them as British property astray? It would be consistent with the release of the Shenandoah pirates.] Some of these muskets have evidently had a strange history. A few are bursted in the side or the breach. About half of them are loaded. A good many contain from two to half a dozen charges each, and one which I saw was loaded to within a hand of the muzzle!—whether the result of drunkenness, insanity the excitement of battle or mere viciousness, is of course a matter of conjecture. It is surprising what a degree of polish and finish is attained in renovating these old rusty muskets. Every part is made as bright as ever. The barrel is put into a lathe and turned out again; the stock is shaved down a trifle, and every fragment is perfectly renewed. When it is finished the piece is somewhat lighter but no less valuable than when it was first turned out of the shop.

MORTALITY AMONG THE FREEDMEN.—Official returns received at the Freedmen's Bureau in Washington show that of the 10,000 free negroes brought down the Cape Fear river in March to Wilmington, by Gen. Sherman, 2,000 died from the 17th of March to the 31st of May for want of medical attention, which it was impossible to afford them at the time. Since the establishment of the medical department of the Freedmen's Bureau in North Carolina, the mortality among the freedmen has greatly decreased.

The Paris Constitutionnel speaks in terms of great praise of Mr. Johnson's late speech to a black regiment, and particularly of that passage in which the President says: "The United States is your country as much as any of the rest of us." "Mr. Johnson," it observes, "could not have made use of happier language to men who at the beginning of the civil war were advised by Mr. Lincoln to go and form a distinct colony in some distinct region of the globe."

DON'T BELIEVE THEM.—If any one tell you that they know a better remedy for coughs and colds than the genuine Hall's Pulmonary Balsam, don't believe it. There is no better remedy, as any one who has ever used it can testify.

"TO BE OR NOT TO BE; THAT IS THE QUESTION" and in response thereto we unhesitatingly say that to be speedily and effectually cured of all the pulmonary ills that flesh is heir to, such as Coughs, Colds, Croup, Asthma, Whooping Cough and Consumption, it is only necessary to use freely that perfect remedy, Newell's Pulmonary Syrup. You need but try it to be convinced.

To collect the large number of such claims now owned in this country—if the settlement of which no similar provision has been made by treaty—demand should be made at once thereof at the proper department and if found just, an amendment will be made to Congress to pass an act retaining the amount thereof out of the Annuities.

The Story I heard in the Smoking-Room

We were staying with a large party at Thornton Court at the beginning of the pheasant-shooting season, when I heard an account of an optical delusion, which is of such a novel character that I can hardly suppose it will not be interesting to many people. The ladies were gone, or at least were supposed to have gone, to bed, for I have often, on the way back from the sleeping room at an hour when all but a few confirmed lovers of the weed are believed to be asleep in a country house, heard through the doors which communicate between some of the young ladies' rooms and the corridors sounds of voices and of laughter which I hardly can imagine proceeded from sleeping occupants, or which have led me to believe the vague statements we hear of little chats by members of the fairer sex over their bedroom fires are not altogether unfounded.

At any rate every one had left the drawing room one by one smokers in every variety and every color of smoking jacket and of dressing gown, had dropped into the before mentioned sanctuary of tobacco, where under sporting pictures and one or two foxes' brushes, and shut off from the rest of the house by double baize doors we formed a party of about half a dozen round the cheerful fire which the chilly days of early October rendered quite acceptable. After all the members of the social community were supplied with cigars and large glasses which contained various compounds of effervescing waters and had settled into their chairs, we chattered over the pheasants the prospects of hunting, the merits of some well known race horses and such other subjects as form the staple of conversation on similar occasions. Somehow or other the conversation turned upon ghosts and spiritualism. All discussed the subject except the usually conversational Col. Houghton, who silently pulled away at a large cigar and gazed steadfastly into the fire.

"Come, Houghton," at last said Randon our host, "what is your opinion on the subject?"

"I certainly have not the least belief in ghosts but a most curious case once occurred to myself for which I have never been able to account," was the reply.

"Oh, let us hear it by all means," cried several, charmed with the idea of getting Houghton who was rather skeptical in most matters, to tell a ghost story.

"I have never told it, but I think that now I can do so, as, by giving other than the real names of the men I fancied I saw after their deaths, no one now will be able to tell who they were," was the reply.

Several new cigars were lighted, some glasses were replenished, and we disposed ourselves to listen, when Col Houghton, looking very grave and with an expression I have never before seen on his face, began his tale:

"I must tell you that my adventure occurred in a country, which I think is the last place on earth where one would have expected to encounter anything mysterious or unnatural, for it was in China, the country of ideal dulness and practicality, that I have witnessed the phenomenon I have hitherto been unable to account for satisfactorily. In order to understand the whole case I must begin at a much earlier period of my life than that at which the circumstance I am about to relate occurred.

"When I was about sixteen years old and at school at Eton, I was seized with a most ardent desire to enter the army, and in frequent letters implored my father to let me leave Eton and go to a private tutor's, where I might undergo a special preparation for the military profession. My father for a long time opposed the idea, as he wished me to go to the bar, and as I was not an over-diligent boy, imagined that in the army I should not do anything except smoke and run into debt. At last my importunities led him to consent to a compromise, and I was sent to a clergyman in the west of England, who received a limited number of pupils, and who was to teach me thoroughly such subjects as would fit me for the army, in case I remained steadfast to my wishes, or which otherwise might be useful in a civil career. When I arrived at Dr. Warnborough's I found there only two pupils, one named Charles Granger, and another who left soon after I joined. Granger and I in a short time became warm friends; we rode together, boated together, had no secrets from each other, and for eighteen months were almost inseparable. Dr. Warnborough and his wife were a most kind, good-hearted couple, and made us most comfortable in every way, an attention, I am afraid, we did not always entirely reciprocate, for we were both rather wild and foolish, although I must do Charles the justice to say that in all scrapes I was the leader and cause. One incident, which amused us much at the time, I may mention en passant. The village in which Dr. Warnborough's rectory was situated, abounded with cats, against which we two boys declared a war of extermination. Many fell before our air-guns (bought surreptitiously at an ironmonger's in an adjacent town) before the idea struck me of making a rug of their skins; but the idea when it did come up in my not over well stocked brain, was regarded, both by myself and Charles, as quite equal to Watt's conception of the steam engine, or, what interested us more, the invention of air guns. Naturally, my idea was soon acted upon; the next cat that was killed was skinned with our pocket knives, the body buried, and all seemed well, when a new difficulty arose. How were the skins to be dried? It would not be safe to place them in any of the outhouses for the doctor might find them, and would lecture us on what would appear to him cruelty, although to us it seemed only in obedience to the dictates of youthful nature that we should kill cats. My invention again came to the front; the dining-room table was turned upside down and the skin nailed on its under surface; the table being restored to its proper position, and the cover put on, no trace of the currier's establishment below was visible. But vision is not our only sense, next day at breakfast Mrs. Warnborough began to think that some of the drains were out of order; but as desiccation had only just set in her idea was pooh-poohed by the doctor, and we boys had too strong stomachs to feel any inconvenience from a smell of which we so well knew the cause. By dinner time, however, there was no doubt of the subject, and the good lady felt, I think, almost a little triumph even on such a subject, when the doctor was obliged to confess she had been in the right in the morning. Every search was made to discover the cause of the evil, which increased hourly; the drains were examined, but all without avail, the room with the table (which no one thought of examining), standing in its centre was uninhabitable; and at last I felt I must tell the doctor; so I went to him, received a mild reproof, and the nuisance was removed."

At the first mention of the table with the cat skin stretched below it, several of the audience expected an account of table-rapping, or of the supposed spiritualism, for the demonstrations of which this very useful article of domestic furniture used, a few years ago, to be the favorite instrument. Webb, of the Artillery, who knew that cat-skin generated electricity, was prepared to account for any phenomenon by the electric agency of the cat-skin below the table; but as the termination of this part of the story opened no chance to him for broaching this theory, it was only in a confidential moment next morning he discovered to me what had been passing in his mind.

Col. Houghton after a few moments' pause, recommenced, "For about 18 months Granger and I lived most happily in Dr Warnborough's house, but at the end of that time the poor doctor caught a cold in returning at a late hour from a visit to a dying parishioner, which settled in his lungs, and from the effects of which he died within a few weeks. Both Granger and myself were deeply affected by the loss; we had both loved sincerely the worthy, estimable man, whose only fault (if he had one at all) had been too much kindness to us.

"As the loss left Mrs. Warnborough totally unprovided for, the curate, who received the late doctor's living, being an unmarried man, generously gave Mrs Warnborough the free use of the rectory and engaged himself to read with us, so that Mrs Warnborough might still receive what our parents paid for our board and lodging to help to eke out her own little income.

"About three months after Dr. Warnborough's death, a match at foot-ball took place in the village between our parish and a neighboring one. Charles and I were players on our side and worked hard at a rather uphill game all the afternoon. In the evening we left the drawing room and retired to the dining room, which after dinner was devoted to our use for the preparation of our lessons. This evening the severe exercise of the afternoon told on us so much that Charles, after a vain attempt on a piece of French composition, threw himself on the sofa and in a few minutes was fast asleep. A quarter of an hour more of Euclid made me follow his example in the arm chair by the fire. The room was well lighted with four candles and a tolerably bright fire. Charles's sofa was at the end of the room farthest from the door and I was sitting in the arm chair which had its back towards the door. After being asleep about an hour and a little before 10 o'clock, as I afterwards found out by my watch, I was aroused by a sudden cry from Charles. On awaking I distinctly saw Dr Warnborough, dressed in his morning gown, walk across the room from the end nearest Charles to the door, where he disappeared either through the door or by opening it and closing it after him, to my surprise I could not see which.

"A few moments sufficed to completely awake me and I rushed out of the door to try to perceive something more of the extraordinary vision but all was still and undisturbed in every part of the house. Charles and I discussed the matter very seriously. He informed me that he had awoke and seen the doctor standing looking at him, the sight caused him to call out and thus awoke me. We neither of us believed in ghosts but were much depressed in spirits by the strange appearance which we resolved to conceal from every one in case it might reach Mrs. Warnborough's ears and give her pain. Often and often we talked to each other however, on the subject and ultimately made a compact that if it were possible whichever of us died first should appear to the other after death.

In a few months after this I was removed from Mr. Warnborough's and at the same time Granger went abroad to look after his father's business in Austria. For six or seven years I was quartered with my regiment in several parts of the United Kingdom; I occasionally saw Granger when we both happened to come to London together, which was not often, but in the excitement of early military life, I thought no more of optical delusions or I almost forgot my compact with Granger and the vision of Dr Warnborough. I was afterwards sent to India, where I still received occasional letters from Granger, but different tastes and pursuits rendered our correspondence unfrequent and uncertain.

"When the expedition to Pekin was determined on in 1860, the cavalry regiment to which I was attached was ordered to China, and we arrived without incident at Talien Bay, where the English army were disembarked in order to wait for the French previous to a common descent on China at the mouth of Peih. The shores of Talien Bay did not afford facilities for encamping the whole army together on account of the small space between the beach and a high rocky range of mountains which ran along the bay at a distance of about half a mile from the sea in some places but which ran close down to the water in others. The cavalry were encamped at an open part of the shore where there was room for their camp between the hills and high water mark. Another portion of the army occupied a similar encampment about six miles further up the bay.

"On account of the rocks running down to the sea between the two camps, there was no road or means of communication along the shore, the only way to go from one camp to the other was to pass through a gap in the hills behind our camp where we always had a picket, ride about five miles across the plain, and re-enter the hills by another gap behind the infantry camp, where pickets were also regularly established. I had many friends in the neighboring camp and used often to ride over there, not unfrequently stopping to dine, and riding back at night. These expeditions were not, I believe, known to the superior authorities, who would probably have stopped my evening rides beyond the sentries, as it was not certain whether the country was infested with Tartars, who might have carried off any stragglers, but trusting to a revolver and my Arab horse, I had individually no fear of being taken, even if attacked.

"One night I had been over to the infantry and had stayed till about eleven o'clock, when I started to ride home. There was a tolerably bright moon shining, and I trotted quickly through the hills, past the infantry picket, and into the plain, where I drew my horse into a walk and smoked a cheroot while he walked quietly along on the smooth turf. About half way across the plain I was aroused from a deep reverie, in which a certain lady in England, who is now my wife, took a prominent place, by my usually quiet horse manifesting an inclination to bolt. I attributed his restiveness to a desire to get home but was astonished, after I had quieted him to find he burst into a cold sweat and trembled violently. Fearing he was ill, I was about to dismount, when a noise behind me struck upon my ear. I looked round and saw a human figure walking behind me at a distance of about a hundred yards. My impression was that I was about to be attacked at last by some Tartars, so I got my revolver out and urged my horse with difficulty into a trot. In a few minutes I again looked behind, expecting to have left my pursuer far in the distance, but to my great surprise, he had walked faster than my horse could trot, and had gained upon me. I was more astonished still when, as he continued to gain on me, I perceived he was dressed in ordinary English evening costume, especially as I did not think a dress of that kind could have been found in the whole army, for we always wore a uniform adapted to the climate, and had little enough baggage allowed us without carrying any superfluities.

"My follower still continued to gain upon me, and I was so much astonished that I continued to gaze on him as, coming nearer and nearer, he became more distinctly visible. When he was within a few yards I saw that the front of his shirt was entirely covered with something red, which looked to me as if a bottle of port had been spilled over it. Nearer and nearer he came, slowly and steadily the moon, high up in the sky, but directly on the way I was going, came from behind a cloud, just as he reached my girths. She shone full on a very pale face, which was turned up to mine, on a mouth from which blood was slowly issuing, and on a pair of eyes which, although now they appeared fierce and staring, I well knew. It was Charles Granger. Still he walked steadily but quickly, he passed my horse's shoulder, then his head. The poor brute shook as if he were going to fall.

"I was so surprised that I could not speak, nor did I remember that I had a pistol in my right hand. When the spectre, (for so I then thought it,) had passed on, I could distinctly see it in front of me walking away from me, but straight along the path I was pursuing. Then I recovered my presence of mind and called after him, in vain I implored, imprecated, and threatened to fire if he did not stop; but on he went steadily, though quickly, without appearing to hear me. I then urged my horse (who had recovered from his fright) into a canter and pursued, but could not gain on my extraordinary fellow traveler, the faster I cantered and even galloped the faster he went but he never ran; his movement was always a long and steady stride. After a pursuit of about ten minutes, I saw the sentry of the outpost at the pass of the hills leading to our camp standing directly in the path the figure was pursuing, loudly I called to let no one pass. I saw the sentry bring his musket to the charge when the apparition was within thirty yards or so of him, heard his cry, "turn out the guard." The men who were loitering near fell in almost instantaneously and quite closed the pass in the rock when the figure appeared to fade away. I hastened forward and asked the sentry

"'Did you see a man walking in front of me?'

"'No, sir,' was the answer, 'no one has been past here to-night since we mounted.'

"'Why did you turn out the guard?' said I

"'Because I saw you galloping and calling out, sir, and I thought you were being chased by Chinamen.'

"The sergeant and other soldiers fully confirmed the sentry's assertion that no persons had passed their post, and as I did not wish to be thought absurd I simply said I supposed I had been mistaken, and rode into camp without seeing anything more of the figure of Granger."

"Did you drink much wine at dinner, Houghton?" here inquired Randon

No, upon my honor, all I drank that day was one glass of rum and water, and that early in the afternoon. I never did drink much of anything in the East for the sake of health, and that I was perfectly sober at the time of the occurrence all my brother officers could testify."

"Did you ever see it again" asked some one, almost acknowledging, by the form of his interrogation, that the story had told on him

"I soon got over the effect of this delusion, which I believe it must have been, although I cannot account for it," resumed Houghton "but I received another shock when we were well on the road into Pekin, about two months afterwards and the English mail arrived. I was away for a day or two from my own regiment when the letters came, and did not receive my own, but in the papers which came to the regiment I was quartered with I read that Charles Granger had died on the very day I had thought I had seen him at Talien Bay. A day or two afterwards, my own letters came to me. One was in Mrs Warnborough's handwriting. She was writing she told me, to give me the particulars of the death of poor Charles my old fellow pupil who had been cut off so suddenly, which she had heard from his relatives. He had been dining at a public dinner at Vienna, when suddenly he fell forward senseless, having broken a blood vessel. The blood poured in torrents over his shirt and he had bled to death, without speaking a word before medical aid could arrive. She then gave me the hour and day of his death. Allowing for the difference of time which exists between Northern China and Vienna, Charles Granger had died in Vienna almost to a minute at the very time I fancied I saw him on the plain of Chinese Tartary. —London Society.

We do not know for what number of people of Virginia the Richmond Enquirer speaks, but in the following paragraph written in reply to a conciliatory article of a cotemporary in that city, it administers a sharp rebuke to those Northern journals who have been clamoring so persistingly for the admission of Congressmen from the late rebellious States

The Southern elections for Congress were altogether out of place. These States had been fighting a death struggle for four years to get out of Congress, and, when defeated, it would have been more dignified to have awaited until Congress invited them to send representatives. We entirely agree with our cotemporary in his advice against disclosing 'a lust for power or office,' and for that reason we would have the Representatives from Virginia to await the invitation of Congress, as so 'erring sons' that go to Washington may, like the other prodigal, confess they are no more worthy to be called thy sons; make me one of thy 'freedmen.' But the people they propose to represent would much prefer to await the invitation before seeking representation.

A lady in Boston, now nearly seventy years of age, can repeat all the Psalms of David and Solomon's Proverbs by heart. No matter at what verse one may begin she will take up the cue and proceed to the end of the chapter. Another lady, the widow of Nicholas [illegible], an old lady of eighty seven, who lives at [illegible], can repeat page after page of the books which interested her in youth and is never better pleased than when she can get a young person to listen to her.

The Columbus, Georgia, Sun of the 21st ultimo says the marshal of Columbus has just returned from a trip for destroying a negro shanty town near Muscogee. Thirty hovels were torn down over the heads of the occupants, in order to drive them out to work. It would seem to us rather questionable whether this was the right course to make them industrious.

Governor Hamilton's proclamation calling a Texas convention says, that all persons are qualified voters who have taken the amnesty oath or have been pardoned, and are eligible to seats in the convention, even if the oath was taken or they were pardoned subsequent to their election.

Robert Dale Owen suggests an amendment to the United States Constitution to the effect that all citizens who can read the Constitution shall vote for President and Members of Congress and that the other qualifications for voters for national offices shall be determined by Congress.

THE STANDARD
AMERICAN BILLIARD TABLES!

AND COMBINATION CUSHIONS

MESSRS. PHELAN & COLLENDER

WOULD RESPECTFULLY CALL THE ATTENTION of persons wanting Billiard Tables to the great superiority of all these tables, [illegible] closely at their establishment

At the Billiard Congress of 1863, composed of all the first class players of America, it was unanimously resolved that tables of our manufacture should be used at all matches for the Championship, as the best and only reliable Tables.

These Billiard Tables have been used [illegible] by all the best players and most all [illegible] who have universally pronounced them unequalled for general excellence and durability.

Several patents for improvements in Billiard Tables have been granted to us by the United States Patent Office, and we have lately obtained a Patent from the French Government for our improvement in Billiard Cushions.

We employ in the construction of our tables a variety of machines specially made for the purpose by means of which we are enabled to turn out scientific and mechanical accuracy hitherto unknown in Billiard manufacture.

Having a long experience and thorough knowledge of all the appliances of Billiards and constantly on hand a large stock of the best and most thoroughly seasoned materials, we are prepared to furnish everything required in the Billiard line with unprecedented dispatch.

The eminent French Billiard Player M. Berger has published the following opinion

'NEW YORK, 21 August 1861

"On the eve of leaving the United States I am happy to declare to amateurs of Billiards that after a tour of eleven months through the principal cities I have been enabled to judge in a satisfactory manner of the superiority of the Billiard Tables manufactured by Phelan & Collender. The system of manufacturing is so superior, that I am happy to introduce their style of cushion into France. They have united to their manufacture of American Billiard Tables that of the French Tables, of remarkable excellence and beauty. For these reasons I am happy to make this declaration.

'BERGER, CLAUDIUS
Prof of Billiards Paris.'

Parties ordering from us will find our prices as low as good work can possibly be made for. We sell first class articles at a fair price, and will not make an inferior article at any price.

Orders by mail carefully and promptly executed. Illustrated Catalogues and Price Lists sent by mail. The 'BILLIARD CUE' a journal published in the interest of Billiards and containing details of all novelties, a copious record of Billiard news and everything of interest to amateurs of Billiards, sent free on application.

Mr. Colfax on the Pacific Railroad.

Mr. Colfax has been lecturing on his recent trip "Across the Continent" in the principal Eastern cities. Previous to December he had addressed crowded houses at Chicago, Milwaukee, Indianapolis, Pittsburg, Wheeling, Janesville, Hillsdale and Philadelphia, and was soon to address audiences on the same subject at Washington City, Baltimore, New York, Brooklyn, Boston, etc. We are informed that he had 150 invitations to repeat his lecture. The following is the concluding portion of it, which will be read with peculiar interest in Oregon:

Always an earnest advocate of the Pacific Railroad as a bond of inter-communication between the Atlantic and Pacific portions of the Republic—a bond of union and of strength—a bond of affection as well as of commerce—my long journey over the plains, and longer voyage on two oceans home, convinced me more than ever of its value, and its invaluable necessity. The arguments for it are so numerous they could not be compressed into an hour's speech, much less into a few paragraphs at the end of an already too lengthy lecture, and can therefore but be barely glanced at.

It is a national necessity; for a country that aspires to such a place amongst the family of nations as ours, should have adequate means of safe and speedy transit between its different parts; and not be compelled, as now, to send passengers and freight over ocean journeys as long as from Boston to Liverpool and back, across the possessions of a foreign country, through unhealthy latitudes, and at enormous expense of time and money. It is a political necessity; for a Union to be compact, blended and harmonious, should not be thus separated if its parts can possibly be bound more closely together; and we all believe that, riveted together as we are by mountains and rivers, Providence has written over our whole territorial extent, so legibly that the whole world can see, and proven unanswerably in the recent battles of our civil war, "what God has joined together let no man put asunder."

It is a military necessity; for if ever our country becomes unhappily involved in war with England and France, our distant shores of the Pacific would prove, with those nations' fleets always in that ocean, the Achilles' heel of the Republic, our most vulnerable point; and once invaded or captured—with the Isthmus route closed or blockaded—our armies to move across the plains, carrying supplies, cannon and munitions of war, how many months would elapse before we could defend them adequately, or at what an enormous expense, I cannot pretend to estimate. It is a commercial necessity; for, with our line of steamers from San Francisco to China, our nation having thus the honor of adding the last lacking link to complete the series by which the world, in another twelvemonth, can be circumnavigated in 100 days by steam, and with the opening of the Pacific Railroad, we shall revolutionize the commerce of the globe, and instead of twice crossing the tropics, or doubling either of the great Capes far down towards the South pole, the line of communication between Eastern Asia and Europe will be across this great highway of nations. It is a necessity, too, of our national development in our onward march of progress and power. Twenty years ago the mineral wealth of our country, as then bounded in territory or discovered in deposits of the precious metal, was so inconsiderable as to be scarcely worthy of computation. Now we have over 1,000,000 square miles from the Rocky Mountains to the Pacific, 1,500 miles in width, and from the British line to Mexico nearly 1,000 in length, proven to be rich in every direction, in mountain and in valley, in river and ravine, with the precious ore. Whole territories seem to be filled with it. Week after week new discoveries are made, rivaling previous ones in the abundance and value of their veins; and these burst on our view, all these golden and silver seams forced into the hidden rock, which was to guard them, by the Creator, when He spoke this world into being, and hidden from view from the morning of creation till now, when they are found to be the heritage of what He seems to intend shall be the wealthiest nation on the earth. Immense as is this area, and limitless in its rich deposits, yet its distance from supplies for its miners; the enormous cost of freight and machinery, goods and provisions; the time consumed in traveling thither and back by the slowly moving ox-trains, all combine to retard their development, and thus to diminish for the present the vast amount of wealth it is yet to pour into the lap of the country and the world. But the completion of the Pacific Railroad—and when one line is secured, and the continent bound together indissolubly, I hope it may be but the trunk line from which branches will radiate, and that other lines on other parallels of latitude may follow—will bless and fertilize the vast interior of the republic, and aid most powerfully in the industrial subjugation and civilization of the continent.

If I had ever entertained doubts, as I have not, as to the practicability of its construction, they would have been dissipated by the journey on which I am commenting. From the Missouri Valley to the Rocky Mountains—one third of this distance, the grade is already substantially made by nature. From the mountains to Salt Lake, either directly across the Snowy Range to the Middle Fork, by which a tunnel might be needed, or around more circuitously by Bridgers' Pass as we traveled, there are no difficulties greater than those surmounted by the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad in crossing the Alleghanies. The last third of the line from Salt Lake to the Sierras, a route is practicable by the valley of the Humboldt, abounding in water, or a shorter route still may possibly be found. You will observe I have not included the Sierras themselves in the calculation, for the indefatigable energy and enthusiasm of the people of the Pacific coast have settled that question already. Those frowning mountains have been regarded by many in the past as almost impassable for railroad trains, and to the eye they seem so yet. But the Central Pacific Railroad, under the vigorous and effective management of Ex Governor Stanford, the Crocker Brothers, and other associates, is being pushed onward up these mountain grades faster, I am compelled to say, proportionately, than on the level plains on this side of the country. It is to cross the Sierras at Donner Lake Pass, 7,000 feet above the sea; but its grade is not to exceed 105 feet to the mile, while on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad they have grades up to 116 feet. I visited this line to inspect personally the progress of the work. Not laborers by the hundreds, but by the thousands, swarmed on its deep cuts and heavy fills. Its officers do not advertise for any given number; but, being very earnestly in earnest, they offer work to as many thousands as will come. 4,000 were busy as bees, and almost as closely packed together at some points, when I rode on horseback on the steep mountain sides they were cutting down, and into the deep ravines they were filling up, using, to [illegible] over one hundred kegs of powder per day for blasting. Nor was I surprised, therefore, on receiving a telegram the day before leaving San Francisco, stating that they had just commenced running trains on the twelve mile section I saw so rugged and incomplete but a month before, having reached a point 55 miles from Sacramento, and an elevation of 2,500 feet, making 24 miles of such road completed this season, and expecting to reach a point 13 miles farther, at an elevation of nearly 4,000 feet, and within 35 miles of the summit, by the opening of the new year. Incredible as it may seem to those who know the character of this Herculean work, they expect to reach the summit before the snow falls next year, and within three years afterwards to run their trains into Salt Lake. Such remarkable energy is worthy of the highest praise, and should be emulated by those building the eastern portion of the line.

The completion of this railroad is almost the first and last thought of every Californian. It seems uppermost in all worldly desires in every heart, wherever we met the people on that outer rim of the Republic, in social circle or in festive scene, in palatial hall or private parlor, on the roadside or the mountain-top, in field or shop, in vineyard or valley, in mine or mill or cottage, the anxious longing question was always propounded with an earnestness that proved their deep solicitude, "When will the Pacific Railroad be built? Can't the Government hasten its completion?" And from matron, and bride, and maiden would come, with eyes sparkling with joy at that thought, the expression, "Then, THEN we are promised that we can go home." I think it is not extravagant to say that this enterprise, so full of interest and prospective joy to them, is not forgotten in their prayers. One of the most eloquent sermons I heard at San Francisco—alluding to the fact that gold mines, with their social discomforts and privations, with many vices that often accompany the pioneers in such a life, do not always of themselves build up well ordered States—closed with reference to the Pacific road as a great reformatory measure, which would bring its tens and hundreds of thousands from the older settled regions, and thus elevate the moral standard, as it increased the population of the Pacific slope. You cannot realize here in what endearing language the settlers of that distant coast speak of the States they have left. When they speak of revisiting the East they do not talk of going back to New York or Indiana, Massachusetts, or Wisconsin, or Pennsylvania, or Michigan; but even if they have resided on those Western shores five, ten or fifteen years, the spot which they left, to seek their fortune in a far-off land, is always called by them—home. It comes as instinctively to their lips as you speak of your city at home—where they were born—where father and mother still live to send them blessings that it takes a month for the mail to convey—where kith and kin are buried in the church-yard—that, and not California, is their home. And the longings to visit home once more, seem as natural there as the love of parent and child. It is this tender and affectionate recollection of home which, as I often told them in speeches and in conversation, sounded more sweetly to my ear than aught else I heard there, that binds that remote portion of the Union so closely to us. It was this which so utterly crushed out the ambitious suggestions of disloyal public men who formerly dominated in California, in favor of a Pacific Republic. It was this, which in the hour of our country's direst need, though far removed from the battle-field, poured such unstinted and princely contributions from all that region into the coffers of the Sanitary and Christian Commissions, those twin agencies going forth with our armies to succor and to save. It was this which, in the darkest hour of the struggle, kept all the coast so loyal and true and devoted to the National cause. There were a half million unseen but potential cords of affection from the hearthstones there to the hearthstones here, that intertwined their hopes and interests so indivisibly with ours. It is for such a people, who have already sent us six to eight hundred millions of dollars, extracted from sterile mountains and broken ravines, for whom I plead, when I urge the speediest possible construction of the Pacific Railroad, and not as a boon to them alone, for its increase of our national wealth will speedily pay back to the Treasury far more than the bonus which now aids in its construction. But I plead for it, too, for our own national development and grandeur.

Already I see in the swift coming future—not weak and sparsely settled Territories upon its route, but rich and growing States, with the iron horse speeding his way through all the valleys and over the mountains, of the interior; not vast untilled and unimproved plains, but irrigation and artesian wells combining to make the arid desert blossom as the rose; not scores of millions per year from the gold and silver bearing rocks the Creator has reserved for ages for our own times, but hundreds of millions. And our Republic, bound together as never before, firmly as the eternal hills over which this great road will run—already with its vast agricultural resources the granary of the world—with these increased facilities—with cheaper transportation, with illimitable mineral fields, with ability to develop their teeming wealth, with improved process of mining, with the gigantic unfolding and disclosure of our yet unimproved capacities—shall thus become, indeed, as our beloved but martyred President predicted to me on that last day, when having lived for us so faithfully, he was at last to die for us—the Treasury of the world.

Proclaiming his own Treason, and Infamy.

The Copperhead press of the East is publishing copious extracts from the book of that imbecile and dotard James Buchanan,—the object being to show that this ancient Miss Nancy President is not censurable for his conduct in permitting the rebellion to be organized under the very eyes of the Government and that in short he did his whole duty to the country in that trying crisis. The book itself is intended to afford a full vindication of Buchanan from all charges of complicity with those who seized the occasion to organize the rebellion. The author has not succeeded in the least degree, in changing the deliberate judgment of the whole country as regards himself and his criminal connivance with the conspirators who made his reception room the secret place where their plots were framed. He has convinced the country of nothing but his own unfaithfulness to his great trust, and has confirmed the public belief in nothing but its previously formed idea of the imbecility—or if it suits better—the senility of the person who, to the unspeakable misfortune of the country, then stood at the head of the Government.

The doctrine upon which Buchanan acted was the false one that the South was abused by the North and provoked into the rebellion. He lays the entire blame at the door of the Northern people. He alleges in substance that the South was goaded into armed resistance to lawful authority and that the "cotton States" were fully justifiable in the course they took to oppose "Northern aggression." He can say nothing severer against secession than that it was "an error" or "a mistake." At the same time he impliedly states that this act on the part of the South was a no greater wrong or crime than was the conduct of the North in taking its firm position against the extension of slavery. The fault, in short, was wholly with the North in not allowing slavery to go into the Territories, and the secession of the South was nothing more than a retaliatory measure which, under the circumstances, had the amplest justification. This argument is set forth in the following arraignment of the Douglas Democracy

It is clear that the original cause of the disaster was the persistent refusal of the friends of Mr Douglas to recognize the constitutional rights of the slaveholding States in the Territories, established by the Supreme Court. These rights the Southern States could not yield after the decision, without a sense of self degradation, and voluntary abandonment of their equality with their sister States, as members of the Union.

The same sentiment is to be seen lurking in the following paragraph wherein, regardless of truth and history, the motives of the Republican party are aspersed and belied:

Encouraged and emboldened by the Democratic party's irreconcilable divisions, the Abolition, or Republican party, no longer confined itself to an opposition to slavery in the Territories. It soon extended its agitation to the suppression of slavery within the States. At the first it sought to save appearances, but the veil was too transparent to conceal its purposes.

Full of the idea that the North was wrong, and the South incontestably right, Buchanan wanted a compromise which should be in effect an abandonment of the whole controversy by the former, and the yielding up to the latter of all that was ever claimed. By the terms of this "compromise" slavery was to be made a National instead of a State Institution. The plan was as follows:

The President's policy was, first and above all, to propose and urge the adoption of such a fair and honorable compromise as might prove satisfactory to all the States, both North and South, on the question of slavery in the Territories, the immediate and principal source of danger to the Union; and should he fail to accomplish this object in regard to the seven cotton States, which there was too much reason to apprehend, then to employ all legitimate [illegible] to preserve and strengthen the eight remaining slave or border States in their undoubted loyalty. These States, he knew, in case of need, might prove instrumental in bringing back their erring sisters to a sense of duty. * * * * *

After an impartial view of all the circumstances, and a careful consideration of the danger of the crisis, the President determined to recommend to Congress to initiate such amendments to the Constitution as would recognize and place beyond dispute the rights of the Southern people, as these had been expounded by the Supreme Court.

We now see how happy a chance it was that this base surrender of liberty was not consummated in the name of compromise. Buchanan had set his heart on having the Crittenden amendments adopted. He thus shows how these measures failed

It will be recollected that a direct vote of the Senate on the Crittenden resolution was defeated by the adoption of the Clark amendment, at so early a period of the session as the 16th of January, when there was still time for action. This amendment prevailed only in consequence of the refusal of six secession Senators to vote against it. They thus played into the hands of the Republican Senators and rendered them a most acceptable service. These were Messrs Benjamin and Slidell of Louisiana; Mr Iverson of Georgia; Messrs Hemphill and Wigfall of Texas; and Mr. Johnson of Arkansas. Had those gentlemen voted with their brethren from the border slave holding States and the other Democratic Senators the Clark amendment would have been defeated and the Senate would then have been brought to a direct vote on the Crittenden resolution

From the above, we suppose the inquiry who killed the Crittenden resolution, will be regarded as set at rest. During these five years the Copperhead journals have persisted in asserting that the South was not responsible for the defeat of that proposition. They will hardly renew these false assertions now, and thus directly impeach the veracity of the man whom they admiringly regard as having been a "model President"

The ex President cannot find a word of censure for the arch-conspirators whom he had in his Cabinet, and by whom nearly all the offices at his disposal were filled; but he can easily utter words of the loudest condemnation against leading members of the Republican party. Take the following diatribe against Mr Seward

Senator Seward, of New York was at this period the acknowledged head and leader of the Republican party. Indeed, his utterances had become its oracles. He was much more of a politician than a statesman. Without strong convictions he understood the art of preparing in his closet and uttering before the public antithetical sentences well calculated both to inflame the ardor of his anti slavery friends, and to exasperate his pro slavery opponents. If he was not the author of the "irrepressible conflict" he appropriated it to himself and converted it into a party oracle. He thus aroused passions probably without so intending, which it was beyond his power afterwards to control. He raised a storm, which like others of whom we read in history he wanted both the courage and the power to quell

The declaration that Mr Seward is not a statesman is well worthy of that beggarly mountebank James Buchanan. Of course there are no statesmen except such libertinicides as Jeff Davis, Floyd, Toombs and others of that class or such flunkeys and cravens as Buchanan himself and the humble mouthed whiners for a compromise on such principles as would involve a complete surrender of liberty honor and manhood. It is this sort of statesmanship that Buchanan affects and it would be unnatural for us to expect him to rise above the mean-spiritedness which produces such servile opinions

Buchanan pretends to assign a reason for not having taken more vigorous action in the matter of reinforcing the forts and looking the conspirators. He says

Had the President attempted to distribute men among the [illegible] of the cotton States as well as Fortress Monroe their absurd inadequacy to the object would have exhibited weakness in stead of strength. It would have precipitated civil war with the cotton States without the slightest preparation on the part of Congress and would at once have destroyed the then prevailing hopes of compromise. Worse than all it would have exasperated Virginia and the other border States then as intent on remaining in the Union it might have driven them at once into hostile action

This is only saying over again that a rebellion may be begun against the Government, and that it is perfectly right for the authors of the treasonable scheme to make any preparations they think necessary for the accomplishment of their object but that it is not at all allowable for the Government to take any precautions for its own defence. The doctrine is that instead of exercising its authority the Government at such a time must be perfectly submissive—that its right to defend itself must not be asserted and that while it lies in this powerless condition treason with as many arms as Briareus may with impunity strike it upon every side

Instead of adopting vigorous measures for the defence of the Government Buchanan tells us that he entered into an agreement with South Carolina pledging the Government to a policy of forbearance toward those who were plotting to destroy it. South Carolina graciously offered conditions and they were meekly accepted

The President having determined not to disturb the status quo of Charleston as long as our troops should continue to be hospitably treated by the inhabitants and remain in unmolested possession of the forts, was gratified to learn a short time thereafter that South Carolina was equally intent on preserving the peace. On the 8th of December 1860, four of the Representatives in Congress from that State sought an interview and held a conversation with him concerning the best means to avoiding a hostile collision between the parties. In order to guard against any misapprehension on either side he suggested that they had best reduce their verbal communication to writing and bring it to him in that form. Accordingly on the 10th of December, they delivered him a note dated on the previous day, and signed by five members, in which they say: "In compliance with our statement to you yesterday we now express to you our strong convictions that neither the constituted authorities, nor any body of the people of South Carolina, will either attack or molest the United States forts in the harbor of Charleston previously to the action of the Convention, and we hope and believe not until an offer has been made, through an accredited representative to negotiate for an amicable arrangement of all matters between the State and the Federal Government, provided that no reinforcements be sent into these forts, and their relative military status shall remain as at present

How humiliating thus to find the United States a suppliant at the feet of South Carolina! The President who, with timid servility, would make so shameful an agreement, does not receive half his deserts, though meeting the universal scorn of the great people he outraged and betrayed

The extracts we have given show the animus of the book. Those who think the ex President is vindicated by his publication of this work, are welcome to make the most of their opinion. They who interest themselves in giving the book a wider circulation, hoping thereby to do Buchanan a service, are only making themselves the heralds of his imbecility and infamy. If these fautors of the ex President would only realize the position in which the person whom they are trying to exculpate, stands before the world they would perceive that silence would become them, and that oblivion would be the most enviable fate that could await him.

The character of a man who can coolly publish to the world the record of his own imbecility and shame, is an object of the utmost aversion, but it may also be a subject for curious speculation. In James Buchanan we have an example of a man who, not satisfied with having achieved a distinction more dishonorable than that which attaches to any other name in our history, now comes before the country reviving the story of his recreancy and disgrace—a story which any other person would have been but too glad to have the world forget but which he with an utter insensibility to his own dishonor, repeats before all mankind. "And having done this"—to borrow the language of Junius in his letter to the Duke of Grafton—"he now sits down for the remainder of his life INFAMOUS AND CONTENTED"

FATE OF ASSASSINS.—History has long since chronicled the death of the Russian Emperor, Paul I, father of the late Czar Nicholas and grandfather of the present Czar Alexander II by assassination but until recently the manner of his murder has been a mystery. A Russian general officer, who was a colonel in the palace horseguards under Paul, in 1801 1802, furnishes Frazers Magazine with the full particulars, from which it appears that Count Phalen, and many other persons, civil and military, employed around the person of the Emperor, were in the conspiracy and that Paul was slain by kicks, hits and stabs and after being killed, that he was most shamefully trampled upon by the assassins. General Benningsen, who subsequently played a conspicuous part in the war against Napoleon, was one of the chiefs of the plot and pointed out the Czar's hiding place to the mob. The writer states that after closely watching their career, he is satisfied that each and every one of the assassins came to a wretched end

"GAINS"—A Copperhead paper says

"Two of Mr Lincoln's Cabinet, Messrs Bates and Blair now act with the Democracy"

Considering that the 'Democracy' have lately been routed more disastrously than ever it does not appear that the party has gained much by the help it has received from Messrs. Bates and Blair.'

GOULD AND CURRY.—A floating item informs us that this famous silver mine paid dividends in 1863, in the amount of $1 480 000. In 1864 $1 410 000 and in 1866 but $618 000. The total for three years is $3 4[illegible]6 000

The complete census of New York City shows a population of 1,722 509. There is an excess of females of 14, 387

A DEPRAVED FAMILY.—The New York Express reports a trial in that city where four girls sisters between the ages of sixteen and twenty two were witnesses. They are all inmates of one house of ill fame in that city. Their father is an orthodox clergyman

HONORS TO A CALIFORNIA POET.—James Lincoln, a California poet has been treated with distinguished consideration by the poets of New York. They gave him a grand dinner at the Astor House at which the venerable Wm Cullen Bryant presided

When Cæsar was advised by his friends to be more cautious of the security of his person and not walk among the people without arms or any one to defend him he always replied to them [illegible] He that lives in fear of death every moment feels its tortures. I will die but once

M here was asked the reason why, in certain countries the king may assume the crown at fourteen years of age and cannot marry before eighteen. It is answered he, because it is more difficult to rule a wife than a kingdom

It is said that there are unclaimed deposits to the amount of $10 000 000 in the Savings Banks of New York. These millions have been accumulating for upwards of a century, and are now regarded as part of the capital stock of the banks

The Weekly Oregonian is published this morning. It contains the latest telegraphic news from the [illegible] California—a selection of the [illegible] from the Daily Oregonian—full and reliable news from the [illegible], and the most [illegible] by any paper in the State.

The average amount of reading matter in the Weekly Oregonian is double that published by any other journal in Oregon; and in the particular of [illegible] the Markets we aim to make it the most reliable [illegible] especially in matters pertaining to [illegible]. The Ship William Tell.—Capt. Wm Jones, chief of the Bark [illegible] Bolles and second officer Clarence P. [illegible] of the ill-fated ship, William Tell, of Boston, which was wrecked on the 23d of December in the Straits of [illegible], about three miles to the westward of San Juan harbor, arrived here by the Active yesterday morning, en route to San Francisco. The ship William Tell sailed from Newport, Wales, on the 8th day of February, 1865, with a cargo of coal, bound for Simonstown, Cape of Good Hope. Arriving off Pernambuco on the 19th of March, the Captain (then) Wm. French was murdered by one of the crew, or some person on board. The ship was run in and anchored in the roads off Pernambuco. Communication was held with the American Consul, who taking charge of the ship, took out the suspected parties and ten of the crew as witnesses, put Captain Jones in command and on the 8th of May the made sail for Simonstown where she arrived about the 25th of June, without accident, or anything worthy of notice. The cargo was discharged, and on the 15th day of August she again sailed in ballast, for Puget Sound. Passed through Bath Straits [illegible] ing to go to the northward of New Zealand. The wind coming from the northward she was compelled to go to the southward. Nothing worthy of notice occurred on the passage. On the 13th of December made Vancouver Island in the vicinity of Nootka Sound. On the 16th entered the Straits of Fuca. On the 19th got within six miles of New Dungeness light. The wind came out from the eastward thick and snowing, and blowing a gale. A succession of heavy gales and thick weather continuing, on the 23d the wind came in E S E and blew with great violence, and in thick weather the ship struck as above, at 6 o'clock A. M. The wind then hauled to S S W, and blew a hurricane. The main-mast was cut away, and [illegible] alongside, by the aid of a ladder, one man succeeded with great difficulty, in getting to shore with a line. [illegible] line was then made fast to the small line which was taken on shore and made fast to a rock. This was [illegible] at about 9 A. M. By this time a tremendous sea had got up and was breaking the whole length of the ship, as high as the main top. A boatswain's chair [illegible] on the line, and all the crew, twenty two [illegible], succeeded in reaching the shore about twelve [illegible]. At a quarter before 1 o'clock a heavy sea struck the ship, which broke her in two; another heavy sea [illegible] and the William Tell was broken in an innumerable number of pieces. All on board were saved, but that was all, they barely escaping with their lives. There [illegible] chronometer, or register saved to show [illegible] as the William Tell ever existed. The [illegible] thus miraculously saved, succeeded in building a [illegible], where they remained until the morning of [illegible], with the exception of five, who left on the 25th [illegible] at the head of San Juan harbor. [illegible] some Indians picked up a bag of clothes, and [illegible] of wreck floating around, which they [illegible] to Mr. Wm Spring, a trader living at Cooper's [illegible] the head of the harbor. They also on that day [illegible] the camp of the five men who had left [illegible] of the wreck, which they as well reported. Mr. [illegible] canoe and five Indians to learn the cause of [illegible] When they found the men and took them to [illegible]. These informed Mr. Spring of the disaster [illegible] to them, and the condition of the rest of the crew. On the morning of the 26th the [illegible] started for the head of the harbor, and [illegible] in getting around a point [illegible] of the harbor, [illegible] they saw two canoes [illegible] by Indians, which proved to be canoes [illegible] in the relief of the party. All but six [illegible] arrived at the settlement that night. On the [illegible] canoe was sent to bring up [illegible]. They all reached Mr Spring's place, [illegible] in a most wretched condition, wet, hungry and cold, not one of them having a change of clothing and it having been very [illegible] weather, they had [illegible] Mr. S. [illegible] set to work to [illegible] and Capt. Jones is so grateful for favors [illegible] this [illegible] until the 29th, [illegible] in was possible for man to bestow, [illegible] to Mr. Spring, [illegible] up the strait, took them [illegible] o'clock at Victoria [illegible] Mr. Francis, provided [illegible] wants and [illegible] them to return [illegible] on the ser[illegible]. All but some five or six had ob[illegible]. Capt. Jones and those who[illegible]. It [illegible] that in this [illegible] by Government [illegible] the case of Mr. Spring, and the Indi[illegible], and any act to re[illegible] the invaluable services they rendered [illegible] would be right worthily be[illegible]. The William Tell was a ship of 1,500 tons, [illegible]

Trade With Victoria.—In reviewing the trade of the [illegible] for the year 1865, the [illegible] has the following:

[illegible] trade with Oregon [illegible] thanks to steam communication [illegible] ten per cent., our exports [illegible] fifty per cent. It will be to our advantage if we [illegible] direct communication [illegible] Portland, and, as the benefits are mutual, we do not [illegible] should not see it to their advantage [illegible] in any expense [illegible] to secure them. [illegible] Washington Territory much nearer us, the tables [illegible]. We have sold them $13,300 less than in 1864, [illegible] have sold us $56,000 less in the same time. They [illegible] 24 per cent. less to Vancouver Island, and [illegible] 18 per cent. less from it. This is due in a great [illegible] this [illegible] law, prohibiting small [illegible] the [illegible]; and very much to the Stock [illegible] one [illegible] last year, both [illegible] to be tied together and sunk in the waters [illegible] our territories but which ought to unite our [illegible]

[illegible] was a free port she offered no induce[illegible] of trade, and her [illegible] might have [illegible]. Then it was no uncommon thing [illegible] here loaded from Victoria, and [illegible] much was left behind which she could not [illegible]. There was an urgent demand then for greater [illegible], and for a regular line of steam[illegible] then felt the importance of securing our [illegible]. Have we not [illegible] over those days, [illegible] that the steamer Active regularly employed, [illegible] of the full [illegible] of free port days, she comes [illegible] little more than enough to pay fuel account. [illegible] is again return to the old policy and you [illegible] to prosper. There is not the inducement [illegible] the field that existed so short a time since [illegible] off of 25 per cent. in the English imports [illegible] which ought to have been [illegible] after [illegible] first principles of the colony.

[illegible] Common Council.—The meeting of the [illegible] last evening, was very brief, and no matters of [illegible] was transacted. Warrants were au[illegible] the amount of [illegible] accounts against the city, [illegible] were referred to appropriate committees to [illegible] upon. Another ordinance, in reference to [illegible] cellars, etc., was introduced and read the [illegible] then referred to the Judiciary Committee. [illegible] a full attendance with two exceptions, but a [illegible] of the members came in so late, as has often been [illegible], that Councilman Rosenheim drafted an ordi[illegible] which requires that the members take their seats [illegible] on each Friday evening, for the purpose of [illegible] the [illegible] of the city, and giving vent to their [illegible] of eloquence. The ordinance was killed before [illegible] the clerk's desk.

—It has come to our knowledge that [illegible] anxious in applying a certain statement made in [illegible] column recently, showing the insufficiency of public [illegible] in a few of Portland's citizens, to Mr Joseph [illegible]. Mr Knott applied to us to know if our intention [illegible] to allude to him, and we supposed we had satisfied [illegible] that this was not the case. We are aware that he [illegible] lately—within twelve months—realized some $75,000 [illegible] 000 from sales of real estate and property about [illegible] city, but to disabuse public opinion we can say that [illegible] case whatever have we implied to him comments [illegible] the [illegible]

[illegible] Mr. Ward.—A splendid bill is offered this [illegible] at Willamette Theatre, on the occasion of the [illegible] of Mr. Ward, the worthy manager. We desire [illegible] a good word for Mr Ward, and hence, would ad[illegible] good attendance on this [illegible]. The Company [illegible] City, and are determined to play, as will be [illegible] close here.

[illegible] Cases.—Some fifteen cases were brought [illegible] Recorder Hoffman yesterday, of violation of the [illegible] law, notwithstanding the notice given by the [illegible] Marshal recently, concerning this matter. The [illegible] let them down moderately. We should think [illegible] so arrested ought at least be compelled to pay [illegible]

Liquor to Indians.—One of those cases so [illegible] Intrusted, of selling liquor to Indians, was brought [illegible] yesterday in the Recorder's Court. The guilty [illegible] John Collins and Chas Chinger were each held [illegible] in the sum of $100 and $200 for their appearance [illegible] next term of the Circuit Court.

[illegible] Times.—The scene presented at Couch's wharf [illegible] was one of active, stirring business. Three [illegible] and one ocean steamer were discharging at one time, [illegible] other craft plying on the river in their regular [illegible]. The steam tug Rabboni was also alongside the [illegible] machinery undergoing some changes.

[illegible]—Capt. Williams yesterday exhibited [illegible] sample of penmanship, from the office of T. N. [illegible] of San Francisco, which consists of a royal page [illegible] executed to show the partial losses, charges [illegible] statement of general average in the case of the [illegible] Merritt. It is a volume well worthy of in[illegible] and preservation.

[illegible] of the Special Session.—The general laws of [illegible] have all been published in the Oregon [illegible]. The special laws of the session are not required [illegible]. The pamphlet edition has also been printed [illegible] forwarded to the Secretary of State for distribu[illegible]

[illegible]—The Daughters of Rebekah are called [illegible] on the evening of the 18th, at the hall of Samari[illegible] I. O. O. F.

[illegible]—Bonds were filed in the case of the bark [illegible], and the vessel proceeded about her bus[illegible]

[illegible] Taxes.—The School Clerk gives notice in an [illegible] relative to the payment of taxes.

The Mines of South and Middle Boise.—Lacking any [illegible] representatives through the public press the mining interests of South and Middle Boise have failed to fill that place in the public mind which their [illegible] [illegible] to the reader [illegible] of the [illegible] as it would [illegible] of the mines [illegible] was [illegible] the prospects [illegible] true that Owyhee has [illegible] preference in the minds of men [illegible] for the investment of their money. A statement of the number of mills on South and Middle Boise will give a better idea of the mining prospects than those that are the [illegible] of interested parties. At some [illegible] since the Dalles Mountaineer we have collected the following statement of the [illegible] and capacity of those mills. The Pittsburgh & Illinois [illegible] and Silver Mining [illegible] mill [illegible] stamps [illegible] on Bear [illegible]. Capt. Bledsoe's mill has six stamps [illegible] Company's mill sixteen stamps, located on Bear creek, South Boise. Wallingham's mill, South Boise, has ten stamps. In the same township there is a 40-stamp mill [illegible] Harris mill, twelve stamps [illegible] the Red Warrior creek, South Boise. [illegible] Company's mill, twenty stamps, located on Red Warrior creek, South Boise. New York & Idaho Company's mill, twenty stamps, Red Warrior creek, South Boise. Libby & C[illegible] mill, twelve stamps, building on Yuba creek, Middle Boise. [illegible] mill, twenty four stamps, building on Yuba creek, Middle Boise. Volcano mill, twelve stamps, Volcano District, South Boise. Here we have a total of 184 stamps, against 197 in Owyhee, and there are now arrangements completed which will more than double the amount of mining machinery in that portion of the Boise [illegible] another year. We make no invidious distinctions between the mines of Owyhee and the section under consideration, but it is plainly necessary to keep in mind the fact that there are other districts as rich, much more extensive and probably more lasting, than that which justly boasts of the Poorman, Oro Fino and Morning Star lodes.

Traveling to see Us.—At a dinner lately given in Washington City, to the Tunis embassy Mr Graham, President of the Metropolitan Club, in his speech alluded to their having come five thousand miles to visit our country. General Hashem said in reply, in true Oriental fashion, that while they have traveled five thousand miles to see us, the congeniality and hospitality they had met with in the United States would make them [illegible] that and only sharpen their desire to travel yet double the distance in order that they might see us all.

Coal Oil in California.—The Santa Cruz Sentinel of the 23d has the following encouraging item concerning "ile:"

The first shipment of oil from the Santa Cruz Petroleum Company's Oil Works in this county, was made on Tuesday last. The lot consisted of 700 gallons, which we are assured is a fine article, equal to the best burning and lubricating oils of eastern manufacture. The supply of illuminating and lubricating oils as also a first rate article of coal tar, will now be constant and of considerable importance. Some 20 retorts and a large distillery for refining the oils will be running night and day, turning out a large quantity ready for market. We learn that several parties are negotiating to erect retorts and refineries at different places on the San Gregorio Ranch and other points on the coast in the vicinity of Pescadero. In a few years, California will undoubtedly produce not only oil enough for her own use, but supply the whole Pacific coast and the Island world.

The Victory of the South.—In a late speech at New York, Henry Ward Beecher said:

"Mr. Phillips said in this very place that the South was victorious. I endorse it in a different sense the assertion. Her greatest enemy was the servile system. It is gone, and she is victorious. She was ignorant of her common people; she knows them now, and she is again victorious. The men who sought to plunge her into a pit of darkness indeed are overturned, and again she is victorious. She will now have wealth, with victory, with temperance, with chastity, and with humanity. She is richer to-day than five years ago, with all her widows and orphans and wasted towns. Men are not always healthy on account of their adiposity. It makes some difference of what the flesh is made. The South has been scoured out, purged, reduced to a skeleton indeed, but now she will put good flesh on her bones, and will be a healthy personage."

Business in New Orleans.—The New Orleans Picayune says:

As evidence of the great business transacted in this city, we may state two facts: One house on Canal street, engaged in the wholesale and ready-made clothing business sold for the month of October last, goods to the amount of $450,000. During that month one banking house paid over its counter an average of $,000, per day. Last Saturday, at this bank, one thousand two hundred checks were paid between bank hours, the total amount of which was $1,700,000. We doubt if as large a business as this was ever done before in this city by one bank.

Increase of Exports from California.—The Mercantile Gazette says it is gratifying to remark the handsome increase in the amount of our exports the present year, as compared with those of 1864, notwithstanding the limited trade of the first six months thereof, resulting from a diminished harvest and consequent high prices of breadstuffs. Our total exports for the year, to December 15th, other than treasure, amount to $14,460,321. This, however, has been mainly since the ingathering of our harvest, yet the excess, as compared with 1864, stated in round numbers at nearly two millions of dollars in value, is not all the product of California, but embraces reshipments of Chile flour and grain, that were imported here beyond needed requirements and could not be placed without a loss.

To conquer fanaticism, you must tolerate it, the shuttlecock of religious difference soon falls to the ground, when there are no battledores to beat it backward and forwards.

"By Heaven! I'll make a Ghost of him that lets me." So said the "noble Dane" and so, in effect, daily says that modern scourge, Consumption, whose ghostly victims yearly outnumber those of grim visaged war. Don't let him. Be warned in time all you who are troubled with affections of the throat and lungs and use Newell's Pulmonary Syrup, which never fails to alleviate these disorders.

"A Slight Cold," Coughs.—Few are aware of the importance of checking a cough or "slight cold" in its first stage. That which in the beginning would yield to a mild remedy, if neglected, soon attacks the lungs. "Brown's Bronchial Troches" give sure and almost immediate relief. "The Troches" have proved their efficacy by a test of many years, and have received testimonials from eminent men who have used them.

Many Cases of Rheumatism, Skin Disease, Diseases of the Urinary Organs, and indeed of Chronic Disease generally, seem not curable by ordinary medical treatment however skillful. For this reason the undersigned has made arrangements for the treatment of this class of diseases, by which the patient may have the benefit of Dr Langston Parker's method of treatment by fumigations; the use of many of the mineral and saline waters; baths in sea water; general and local baths of water, heated air and simple and medicated vapor, in addition to such other medical or surgical treatment as may be indicated.

MR NASBY CONVERSES WITH GENERAL MACSTINGER OF SOUTH CAROLINA

WASHINGTON, (D C) November 18th—Sence the November elections I hev bin spendin' the heft uv my time in Washington I find a melankoly pleasure in lingerin around the scene of so many dimokratic triumphs Here it wuz that Brooks, the hero, [illegible] Sumner here it wuz that Calhoun & Yancey and Breckenridge achieved their glory and renown besides it's the easiest place to dodge a board bill in the yoonited States There's so many congressmen here who resemble me that I hev no difficulty in passin for one two thirds of the time.

Yesterday I met in the readin' room of Willard's Gineral MacStinger of South Karliny The Gineral wuz gloomy Things didn't suit him, he observed, and he wuz afeered that the country wuz on the high road to roon He had bin absent from the yoonited States suthin over four years, which time he hed spent in the southern Confederacy When he went out, the constooshnal dimocrisy had its rites which wuz respected On his return wat did he see? The power in the hands uv radikals ablishunism in the majority every where a ex tailor president—a state uv affairs disgustin' in the extreme to the highly sensitive southern mind He had accepted a pardon only becoz he felt hisself constrained to put hisself in position to go to congress, that the country might be reskeud from its impendin peari He shood go to congress and then he shood ask the despots who now have control whether

1 They spozed the south would submit to hoomiliatin condishuns?

2. What Androo Johnson means by dictatin to the convenshuns uv sovereign states?

"Why," ses he, "but a few days ago this hoor hed the ashoorence to rite to the Georgy convenshun that it 'must not'—mark the term—'must not ascoom the confedrit war debt Is a tailor to say 'must not' to shivelrus Georgy? Good God!—where are we driftin? For one, I never will be consiliated on them terms—never! I never wuz used to that style uv talk in dimokratic convenshuns.

"Ez soon ez I take my seat in congress," recoomed he, "I shel deliver a speech, which I writ the day after Lee surrendered, so ez to hev it ready, in which I shel take the follering ground to wit:

"The south hev buried the hatchit, and hev diskivered that they love the old Yoonion above everything on earth. But,

"The north must meet us half way, or we won't be answerable for the consekences. Ez a basis for a settlement, I shel insist on the follerin condishens:

"The federal debt must be repoodiated, principal and interest, or ef paid, the southern war debt must be paid likewise—ez a peace offerin The doctrine uv state rites must be made the soopreme law uv the land, that the south may withdraw whenever they feel theirselves dissatisfied with Massachusetts Uv coarse this is a olive branch.

"Jefferson Davis must be, to wunst set at liberty and Sumner hung, ez proof that the north is really consiliatory. On this pint I am inflexible, and on the others immovable."

An old man, who hed bin listnin to our talk, murmured that there was a parallel to this last proposition.

"Wher?" demanded the General

"The Jews, I remember," replied he, "demanded that Barrabas be released unto them, who was a thief, I believe, and the Saviour be crucified; but I forgit jist how it was."

The General withered him with a glitterin glance and resoomed:

"I shel, uv course, offer the north suthin in the way of compensation, for the troo theory of a republican Government is compromise. On our part we pledge ourselves to kum back, and give the north the benefit of our kumin back, so long ez Massachusetts condux herself akkordin to our ijeas uv what is rite.' But ef this ekitable adjustment is rejected, all I hev to say then is, I shel resign, and the Government may sink without wun effort from me to save it."

I was about to give in my experience when the old man, who was sittin near us, broke in again:

"My name," ses he, "is Maginnis, and I live in Alabama. I want to say a word to the gentleman from Karliny, and to the wun from New Gersey."

"How," retorted I, "do you know I'm from Noo Gersey, not havin spoken a word in your hearin?"

"By a instinct I hev. Whenever I see a suthener laying it down heavy to a individjoal whose phisynogamy is uv such a cast that upon beholden it you instinktively feel to see that your pocket-handkercher is safe, a face that wood be dangerous if it had curage into it, I allus know the latter to bee a northern copperhead. The Noo Gersey part I guessed at, becos, my frend, that state furnished the lowest order uv copperheeds uv any uv em. Pardon me if I flatter you. But what I wanted to say was that I suppose that suthin hes happened dooren the past 4 years. I was an original accessionist. Some years ago I hed a hundred niggers, and wuz a doin well with em. But, unfortunately, my brother died, and left me as much more land but no niggers. I wantid niggers enuff to work the land, and spozed ef we cut off from the north, and the slave trade was reopened, I cud git em cheaper. Hence, I secesshed. Sich men as Gineral McStinger told me the north woodent fight, or [illegible] secesh, but I did it. I went in for [illegible] back shorn I secesshed with 100 [illegible] 200, and mine! I find myself back into the [illegible] with nary a nigger.

"And all this is [illegible] bold nonsense, you old [illegible] General MacStinger; "you talk [illegible] will do, and wat you won't. Hevent you diskivered that you are whipped? Hevent you [illegible] that you are subjoogated? Are you back into the yoonyun uv your own free will [illegible] you got a pardon in your [illegible] document is all that saves your neck from stretchin hemp? Why do you talk uv what Southkarliny will and wont do? Good Lord! I recollect about a year since Southkarolyny would never permit her soil 2 be poluted by Yankee hirelins yit Sherman marched all over it with a few uv em, and scarcely a gun was fired at em. So, too, I recollect that the red ste's wich was agoin to whip the entire north, and wich would, ef overpowered, submit gracefully and with dignity to annihilation and sich, wuz the first to git down on her marrow bones and beg for peace like a dorg. Ef you intend this talk for the purpose uv [illegible] the north, believe me, when I say that the north [illegible] shared es it was. [illegible] profession, consider me the people. Ive heard it before, and I'll take no more uv it until my stummick settles, It makes me puke. The fact is we are whipped, and hev got to do the best we kin. We are agoin to pay the federal debt, and aint goin to pay the confederet debt. Davis will be hung and serve him right.

States rites is dead, and slavery is abolished, and with it shivelry, and its my opinion the South is a d—d sight better off without either of em. I kin swear now, after livin outside uv the shadder uv the flag 4 years, that I love it. You bet I do. I carry a small one in my coat pocket I hev a middlin sized one waved by my youngest boy over the family when at prayers, and a whalin big one wavin over my house all the time. I hev diskivered that its a good thing to live under, and when sich cusses as you talk uv what you will and won't do under it, I bile. Go home, you cuss, go home! You South, and pullin off your coat go to work, thankin God that Johnson's merciful enuff to let you go home at all, instead of hangin you up like a dorg, for tryin to bust a government too good for you You, North, thankful that the men uv sense uv the North hed the manhood to prevent us from roolnin ourselves by makin sich ez you our niggers. Avaunt!"

And the excited Mr Maginnis, who is evidently subjoogated, strode out uv our presence. His intemperit talk cast a chill over our confidence, and we didnt resoom with the ease and freedom we commenced with, and in a few minutes we parted. I dident like him

CONJUGAL AFFECTION.—In one of the western departments of France, a man of the name of Le Fort, accused of conspiring against the Republic was seized and committed to prison. His wife, trembling for his fate used every means that courage and affection could inspire to restore him to liberty, but without success She then bought with a sum of money permission to pay him a single visit in his prison At the appointed hour she appeared before her husband, clothed in two suits of her own apparel With the prudence of not allowing herself, at so critical a juncture to give or receive useless demonstrations of tenderness she hastily took off her upper suit of attire, prevailed upon her husband to put it on and to quit the prison, leaving her in his place Le Fort escaped and the stratagem was not discovered till the second day

"Unhappy wretch," cried one of the committee, "what have you done?"

"My duty" she replied, "do thine"

But instead of beheading her, according to her expectations, the committee were so struck with her reply, that they at once restored her to her husband [illegible]

WEEKLY REVIEW

PORTLAND, January 12th 1866

The leading event of the week has been the arrival of a heavy treasure express from the upper Columbia and a large number of persons from various sections in the upper mining interior from all of whom we have been able to obtain the most flattering sentiments concerning the condition of matters in those regions The discovery of cinnabar [illegible] a question, in the John Day country, and the results may easily be anticipated. The facts are so plain in the light of certain occurrences and discoveries, that it is a question concerning the future of the northern mines by any intelligent observer It was a long step for the miners of this section of the Pacific coast to take, to change for something better than existed elsewhere but no doubt is now entertained of the [illegible], and thousands of people are set with [illegible] with regard to our advancement

The deposits of cinnabar mentioned as being discovered in John Day, are located four or five miles below Canyon City on the road from the Dalles to John Day mines The deposits of ore extend to the width of several hundred feet, and have been traced five miles and a half south from John Day The vein runs into hills, which attain to the height of six or seven hundred feet, thus affording a good chance to work the ores to advantage. Timber exists in large quantities at a small distance from where the mine is located By tests made at the Dalles, it is demonstrated that the croppings will yield an average of thirty per cent of quicksilver These consist in cinnabar, held in a base of crystalline silicates Of course the ore will become richer at the depth of a few feet Even the present prospect will pay well and the discovery is likely to turn out as valuable as that at New Almaden, which is worth any ten mines of gold or silver in the world In fact its value is beyond computation, and it can be justly claimed as the most valuable of all the mining discoveries yet made in the Columbia basin Its bearing on the future prosperity of the country is of course important, and its speedy development is much to be desired

From South Boise we have now in the city a number of gentlemen, en route to the East, among whom we may mention Mr Wm n Waddingham Superintendent of the gold and silver mining company bearing his name The mill of his company is in active operation, and from a statement published in the Alta of the 30th ult, from the correspondent County, we are informed that the nett profits of running the mill (10 stamps), one month is $11,855 25, after deducting interest on the capital stock, wear and tear, insurance, and freight on bullion, labor, etc In the exhibit the value of the rock is placed at $25 per ton, while very often it would result a much higher figure But, by the statement as given, it will at once be apparent to the most casual observer, that the profits on quartz mining are large, when properly conducted, and it is a good indication for the future of the quartz mining regions

From Montana we also have the most flattering accounts, and at a meeting of citizens held in this city on Thursday, steps were taken which will prove decisive in securing to us the immense trade of that section, not so far off now as formerly in consequence of the certainty of through communication by the first day of April, placing us not to exceed 80 days from Helena and Virginia City which is a gain of weeks and months over any other section that may claim the right or advance theories for supplying the miners there Among the leading freighters to Montana, we hear mentioned Mr Majors, of Majors, Russell & Co, who have for years been engaged in the business to Santa Fe and other points, in the service of the government Mr Majors has already determined upon freighting from the Columbia river this year

The Columbia river was open a sufficient length of time during the week to admit of a connection at the Cascades so far as passengers were concerned, who came and went freely for a day or two Another change of weather, however, again closed the river, and at present writing we have no communication with the upper Columbia. The supply of flour and staple articles of subsistence in the Dalles was deemed sufficient to meet local wants, and the entire absence of outside demand kept prices at fair living figures for consumers It was not so with coal oil and candles, however, and there was considerable speculation in those articles Several hundred gallons of coal oil were packed from this city and sold readily at large advances

Matters relating to finances are extremely void of interest. We have great faith in the future prospects of business here, and deem it safe to say that we will be able to safely pass through the financial difficulties so imminent at this time at the East Business is based on a sound principle in Oregon, and our people are capable of availing themselves of all the concordant circumstances of future enterprises without creating a financial convulsion. The success of plans already devised for the future, the working the mines, making of iron, developing coal veins, erecting manufactories and work shops, and like means for which capital is sought, and in which it is prudently and systematically being invested, is quite certain Instead of being alarmed at destructive panics it will be seen that the people of Oregon have much to expect from their investments of a different nature The iron interests promise very flattering results within the year just begun

The Boston Statesman, which is possessed of admitted ability to furnish correct reports of financial operations, thinks the transition from a condition of financial fever to one of financial health is soon to be successful The Statesman says.

> "The gradual process of contracting the excessive body of the national currency recently set in operation by the Secretary of the Treasury, meets only with favor from the large majority of the American people The protests of any special class against the continuance of such a process fail to represent the general interests sufficiently to excite the hope on any side that their intervention will avail. There is a body of legal tender notes in circulation amounting to over six hundred millions of dollars, fifty millions of which Secretary McCulloch has begun his experiment with retiring, by converting them into gold-bearing five-twenty bonds It is expected that he will ask for power from Congress to proceed with the work of construction, with a view to bringing paper and gold into practical relationship at the earliest day compatible with sound policy and general commercial safety His Fort Wayne speech furnished a very clear indication of what his financial policy ought to be, and it is that which is demanded by the abnormal condition of the national finances, by the permanent business interests of the country, and by the undeniable necessity of preserving the resilient credit with firmness in foreign countries "

It is urged that at least $200,000 of the present circulation may be prudently retired when an equal amount of gold and silver, now locked up from use, will take its place as currency at once by reason of the reduction of the volume and the increased value of paper

Wholesale and Jobbing Prices.

PORTLAND January 12th 1866

The same causes which have for two weeks past affected a depression in the markets exists at this time—the close of navigation by ice No freight has been transported up the Columbia during the period under review, and consequently business is inactive. The appearance of three or four vessels along the wharves discharging is somewhat animating, and serves to show that stocks are being replenished, even though there is little inquiry for goods at present

The Samuel Merrill has about completed discharging her cargo which was subjected to the general average on account of damages but to no great amount

The bark W H Scranton has also nearly finished discharging and both will receive freight and have quick dispatch for San Francisco

The bark A A Eldridge cleared this morning after discharging a handsome cargo from Honolulu of Sandwich Island products, and will complete her loading for that destination at Rainier

The steamer Active had a light cargo from Victoria generally composed of English fabrics and foreign hardware with a portion of liquors ale and porter It is thought she will return to Victoria, leaving on Tuesday evening

Woolen and Cotton Goods.

PORTLAND January 12th, 1866

Cotton goods are particularly firm. The extensive demand to be supplied since the close of the war, the deficiency of supply of raw material, and the scarcity of operatives, renders the market at the East imperatively firm, and while such Southern cities as New Orleans Charleston, etc have caused an excessive demand for a share of all this the supply to Chicago St Louis, and other Western cities as well as the Pacific coast, has greatly diminished The San Francisco market is entirely barren of assortment, and prices are particularly firm

THE STANDARD

AMERICAN BILLIARD TABLES!

AND COMBINATION CUSHIONS

MESSRS. PHELAN & COLLENDER

WOULD RESPECTFULLY CALL THE ATTENTION of persons wanting Billiard Tables to the great superiority of their tables, manufactured exclusively by their establishment

At the Billiard Congress of 1863, composed of all the first-class players of America, it was unanimously resolved that the tables of our manufacture should be used at all matches for the Championship, as the best in every respect

These Billiard Tables have received the unqualified approval of the best players and most competent judges who have only really pronounced them unequal [illegible] [illegible]

Seven distinct patents for improvements in Billiard Tables have been granted by the United States Government, and we have lately obtained a patent from the French Government, for our improvement in Billiard Cushions

We employ in the construction of our tables a variety of machinery especially made for the purpose, by means of which we obtain a correctness and a scientific and mechanical accuracy hitherto unknown in Billiard manufacture

Having a long experience and thorough knowledge of all the appliances of billiards and constantly on hand a large stock of the best and most thoroughly seasoned materials, we are prepared to furnish everything required in the Billiard line with unprecedented dispatch

New York 2d August, 1863

"On the eve of leaving the United States I am happy to declare to all amateurs of Billiards that, after a tour of eleven months through the principal cities, I have been enabled to judge in a satisfactory manner of the superiority of the Billiard Tables manufactured by Phelan & Collender The system of manufacturing is so superior, that I am happy to introduce their style of cushion into France They have united to their manufacture of American Billiard Tables that of the French tables, I remark their excellence and beauty For those reasons I am happy to make this declaration

"BERGER CLAUDIUS

Prof. of Billiards, Paris "

Parties ordering from us will find our prices as low as good work can possibly be made for We sell first class articles at a fair price, and will not make an inferior article at any price
